1998 MR. PEGASUS
PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Congratulations to the Class of 1998!

Today we celebrate your success. Each of you set a distant goal for yourselves, and today you have reached it. Some of you are the first in your family to obtain an advanced degree. Many of you have met this goal while attending to other difficult responsibilities; you have held down full or part-time jobs, raised families and still found time to invest in your education.

As all of you know, no one reaches their goals without the help and support of others. In saluting the accomplishments of today’s graduates, we acknowledge the encouragement and sacrifice of their family members. We also pay tribute to Bronx Community College’s outstanding faculty and staff. Their guidance and leadership have nurtured and cultivated the talented Class of 1998.

This class will always hold a special place in my heart. This Commencement coincides with the Fortieth Anniversary of Bronx Community College. You take your place among the first half-century of accomplished BBC alumni, many of whom left this campus to assume leading roles in their communities. We will watch with pride and anticipation to see you take your places beside them.

As you leave this campus, it is time for you to set new goals and dream new dreams. Never stop learning. Be the originators of your own destiny. We know you will continue to make us proud.

The Case of the Community College Student's Dilemma

Community College student James M. was facing a decision about his future. He had two options: continue his studies at the community college or transfer to a four-year university. Both paths had their advantages and disadvantages.

At the community college, James could take advantage of the lower tuition rates and the availability of specialized courses. However, the community college lacked the research facilities and the prestige of a four-year university. James was unsure if he could succeed in the rigorous environment of a four-year university.

On the other hand, transferring to a four-year university would provide him with more opportunities for research and hands-on experience. However, this option would require him to pay higher tuition rates and juggle his studies with other responsibilities.

James was torn between his short-term goals and his long-term aspirations. He knew that his decision would shape the rest of his life. He decided to seek advice from his guidance counselor and campus-speaking events.

At the end of the day, James realized that the best option was the one that allowed him to grow and learn. He chose to transfer to a four-year university, where he could pursue his dream of becoming a scientist.

The Final Debate on Plan to Eliminate Remedial Courses at Senior Colleges by 2001

By: Metha M. Thomas

Business Manager

Without a plan to eliminate remedial courses at senior colleges, we would not be able to achieve our goal of providing a quality education to all students. The plan proposes to eliminate remedial courses at senior colleges, which are essential for students who need additional support to succeed.

James M. agreed with the plan, as he believes it would be beneficial for students who are struggling academically. However, Metha M. Thomas, the business manager, disagreed with the plan, stating that it would be detrimental to the students who need remedial courses.

In the end, the debate was inconclusive, and the decision was left to the senior college administration. The plan to eliminate remedial courses will be implemented only if it is proven to be effective.

What Goes Up Will Go Down As A Step Forward To Improve Service

Securities Department, in a move to improve service, has implemented a new system that will allow customers to check their accounts online. This system will make it easier for customers to access their accounts and view their transactions.

The system is user-friendly and provides a comprehensive overview of the customer's account. Customers can access their accounts 24/7, which will make it more convenient for them to manage their finances.

In conclusion, the new system will improve the customers' experience and make it easier for them to manage their finances. The Securities Department is committed to providing the best possible service to its customers.
Despite the Body-Pierced Appearance, It's Not What's On the Outside But What's Inside That Counts

By Jamie D.

...String bangles low over the city. I enjoy the Bee's Knees Dance on 7th and Ave.

...But business on my mind. I need a new one, and where to get it is from four different locations of information: Acid and \"A\" Answers. I know that if I asked friends, I would get enough to support a group. If the sky itself sends the growing trend of \"body piercing\" to the floor, I would be the one to recover from.

...I left my appointment with a sense of sadness and a profound feeling of a life in the making. As a writer, it is an impressive display of the great variety of body modifications that are currently being practiced in society. Facing the same situation, with a focus on the men and women of society, I find, magically, we are experiencing a novel and effective way of life.

...Looking back on my world, I see the fear of a future from which I am no longer a part. It reminds me how lucky I am that for the rest of my life I have not chosen to be on the margins.

...I saw several young men and women. For the past few years, I have been seeing these individuals who have been going through the process daily. I have watched them change physically with each new piercing. I have watched them change emotionally, and I have watched them change mentally.

...The body-pierced appearance, it seems to be the new trend. The "body piercing" trend has been spreading rapidly, and it is not surprising that many people are finding it more fashionable than ever before.

...The media has been doing a great deal of promotion for this trend, and it is expected to continue for a long time to come. However, it is important to remember that the decision to get a piercing should be made carefully and with consideration.

...That counts.
Write of the Month
A Festive Day To Eat Your Cares Away
By Wilson Aljko
Once February 27th is here and the sun is rising in the morning, joy proclaims itself in every Dominican. This day is going to be full of satiety, fun, happiness, and pride for a true national day, "The Quisqueya Nationality." El Carnaval is a traditional holiday during which Dominicans celebrate their independence, a day which we won from the Haitians on Feb. 27th, 1844 at Duarte, Haiti. The festivities of El Carnaval is celebrated throughout the island, and involves parades, dance, music, costumes, and different ways of entertainment in different places.

Different activities take place during El Carnaval or Independence Day. "Charros Cafeteros" or "Timbales" are the main attractions in El Carnaval. Dress up like devils, with several colored, root with horns, and national outfit, these figures play the most important and colorful part in El Carnaval. Some of them for the people with hard balloons made from cow or hot baloons. Last, sometimes people dress up like the Virgin of Montecatini, or like in Montecatini, city, they are a whip in each other. They make El Carnaval look like one of the most joy for the kids.

Fireworks, parades, bands and groups from various organizations complete El Carnaval and the big party in every city, but without our Caribbean rhythm. "The Merengue," a complete musical work. In the parades, every city presents its characteristic features in Doctoro or Dominicans and its customs in the dance. Several kinds of local music sound the whole day along the streets, selling fried chicken, corn, plantain, bananas, peanuts, nuts and rice and beans. In the dancing part, Dominicans can’t resist the rhythm of their music "Presidente" to cool off the warm and tropical weather of our country.

The carnivals make us feel happy for our freedom and proud of the Dominican like Duarte, Sanchez and Melo, who fought against the Haitians to get independence for our Dominican Republic, so we always recall the memory of these days. They are also known as the festival of our patriotism. I am proud to be Dominican, and I will celebrate Independence Day or El Carnaval with family, friends, and countrymen in our community.

Identity

I see myself a pharaoh,
Killer of my destiny.
I’ve come to know my identity,
And no man can take it away.

To some I am the son of Isis,
to others Sun Ra,
Yet still another speaks
And say I am Tahar.

But when my mirror speaks,
It tells me prince among men,
And I know my real identity,
For I am all of them.

Please Don’t Take My Time Away

I have time, too much some say.
Yet the time I spend is not wasted
But time I spend deep down inside my soul
To find myself, where did all the laughter go?
But for a moment I’ve found it again
When brought forth into the world was such a lovely image
Like a beautiful delicate flower on soft spring day,
Please don’t take my time away.

Naomi Perez (Silliness)
A Summer Poem

The green, green leaves of the evening's hush

As a gossamer-strung against hermaphrodites,

Clinging, clinging, before my eyes,

The sleeping world in wondrous capture.

But

Shaking trees clank to the moon,

With the accompaniment of the breeze.

Of the earth in solemn hymn,

This lyric by the passing wind.

Adventures of cricket music fill the ears.

A peaceful harmony with summer's nights.

If nature plays upon harmonies.

The sound prevents taught daybreak.

The singer, like a maestro,

Over the land.

Rising heavily over the land.

If I return to thiscolloquy?

Not of renown?

But no man so familarizes

what manner of remedy,

The secret stirring of evening's eyes.

Aisling gently in the falling breeze.

A Man With No Name

In the beginning I had no name.
But tell me dear fellow; who is to blame?
Said she to be.
What's this child to be —
Doctor, lawyer or should we wait to see?

I tasted life's pleasures,
Saw its fleeting scenes —
The harts; the pains, the sadness,
And all things unseen

I now stand before you.
As you can see,
But, don't I have a number
Identification me.
Through all the mishaps, pride and shame.
I'm still the same being —
A man with no name.

New York, New York,
Land of skyscrapers
And multiple shades of trees,
The sun is gleaming
Over your profile:

All the giant windows
Of your majestic buildings
Become mirrors as they listen,
And talk back to the sun

What are they saying?
They certainly are communicating
I can hear them say
"It has been a gorgeous day.
Y hasta la proxima vez"

The sun hides
Behind the buildings
At the west of the Hudson
It is the end of daylight

As I look back
At the tall windows of the east
They are not saying
Anything anymore
They seem sad and
Cold as marble,
They are not radiant anymore
Now that the sun is gone.

Because I Love You

I can't hate you because I love you —
You're a thing of pity, a mere cartoon of a man
You might have been "all that" once, but look at you now.
In your glory days, I wasn't worth the dirt on your shoe.
I resented you for every lie you told, twice as much
When the sun set on the days you never showed.
Today you need me, though you walked out on us.
Your children, to raise another man's child.
I truly cherished the meager gifts I received on Christmas. When I visited your home.
I saw your stepchildren had a better version
Of everything you ever brought me.
You lived a good life, and the women you lived with Wanted for nothing, I witnessed my mother go hungry
When there was just enough food for us children to eat.
Now, years later, you're all alone, and you need me.
I should let you starve and know the feeling of helplessness
As my mother knew. But no matter how much I try to hate you.
I can't, because I love you.

Debra Fisher
Believe in Yourself
Believe in yourself
as much as the depth is within your soul.
Feed your talent
that your soul frees.
Understand your heart
the way faith in you maintains its growth.
Don't lose your illusion
when others do doubt.
It is your life to live
live it completely.
Learn from your mistakes;
don't live in the past;
and never leave
this infinite world.
Believe in yourself,
find the best in yourself,
let your spirit take control.
Go in a route
that is right.

Everyday's The Same

Everyday's the same,
Up at six... In by nine
And
God help you
If you get caught
In the mix of time.

Yes,
Everyday's the same,
That much is true.
But no matter what,
I swear to Almighty God
I will see it through

Amidst the tombstones, he found hers. He embraced her vision, as the tears made all a blur.

He thought of the first day when they met,
Their lives would become one and not separate.
He longed for her touch, to be near her, to hear her laugh,
Now he only had memories of her in the past.
The love they shared was everlasting and true;
A love such as theirs would survive all that is new.

Undying Love

Poem to Takiya:

There was a time when life was fresh.
When flowers, blooming, caught our eye
And as we basked in the sunlight, blessed.
Our child laughed; he seldom cried.
We straggled as we worked and hurried.
Together forging bonds so firm.

But, just as we were on a roll
As love prevailed, we reached our goals,
Forever etched in each other, hearts aligned.
So confident, perhaps too bold —

We didn’t notice, as we loved
Secure that life would be our ‘high’
That flowers, seeking pure skies
Abruptly, gone and wilted, died.

Through all the seasons hot and cool
There are still flowers to behold.
Yet now I just keep walking in
The sunshine perished when you died.

Let this be your hearth, a place of warmth and friends.

Our IUCC: Carefully, cautiously, we make love.

You know not the path you tread.

Is a good doctor.

Your best patient.

What is it that we love?

It is the emotional soul that touches others.

It is your heart that is willing to love.

Yet few know.

It is your heart that is willing to love.
The Essence of Love

Love can be beautiful, exotic, and sweet.
The warmth of it enchanting and quite unique.
Words of endearment to warm the soul
Singles and secrets that should never be told.
True love is simply a gift
Meant to be cherished against all odds.
For better or worse is the promise we make
Sacrifice and commitment for heaven’s sake.
Two people united by wedded bliss
Hearts joined together with the seal of a kiss.
Feats of love, so strong, lovemaking so sweet
The essence of love, what a joyous treat!

Peculiar Love

She thought about him, and the soft breeze caressed her cheek.
She thought he was there, but nothing became weak.
She missed the moment that had carried them away,
And could not understand why things had gone astray.

She missed for hours over what they did wrong,
What the love they shared, precious and strong?
Together they wandered and led their way,
Masking their feelings, both feeling betrayed.
The communication between them that was once open and free
And seemed to shut down, but only temporarily.

Then out of a book came a story false ending,
They misread their true and had a second wedding.
In the truth, their visions with a heartache of love.
Each love they were headed for a lifetime of love!

Dr. Hall Authors Beerbohm Book

Distinguished Prof. John Hall (Eng) has published with Yale University Press a book called Max Beerbohm Caricatures. Max Beerbohm has long been regarded as the foremost caricaturist of his day which spanned roughly 1890-1930. The Times acclaimed him "the greatest of English comic artists."

This book reproduces 213 of Max's works, 80 in color. His chief subjects—or "targets"—were novelists, poets, playwrights, critics, actors, artists, politicians, kings, and himself. But he also drew lawyers, musicians, professors, financiers, restaurateurs, sportsmen, newspaper magnates, industrialists, and luminaries from the past.

The book has received superb reviews. It was the subject of a three-page article in The New Yorker by Joseph Epstein. Max Beerbohm Caricatures, he wrote, is "an elegant book—one of those rare productions, which demonstrate that sound scholarship can be put to the service of pure pleasure." It was named "the most entertaining book of the year" by Richard Dimnent in the London Daily Telegraph.

Although best known as an authority on the English novelist Anthony Trollope Dr. Hall has published four books on Beerbohm with the Yale University Press.

We have come to the end of another year full of happiness, joy, pain and sorrow. We all had many obstacles to overcome and I am proud to say YES!!! - we all have persevered and conquered one of our many goals in life. To become whatever we desire with the accomplishment of our college degrees. Even though this may be just a first step for some, it is something we can take pride in. This goes to show, that whatever we set our minds to we can achieve.

Congratulations To The Class Of 1998!!!

I wish you luck in your future endeavors and be proud of your Accomplishments.
