COOP BEGINS SELF-EVALUATION

In November, the Division of Cooperative Education held its first meeting to examine the Coop program. The group of nineteen, including deans, coordinators, student interns and special guest, Dr. Martin Moed, gathered in Manhattan to evaluate the assumptions of the program developed over the past two years.

The topics under consideration were: Coop and the Employer; the Student; and Educational Innovations and Outcomes. Some assumptions posed were: Employers on the whole would find the quarter system schedule useful and reasonable attractive; Students would share the belief that their internships were of educational value; and experiences acquired during the internship would make classroom activities more exciting.

The plenary session was devoted to a broad discussion of the topics. After lunch, the group divided into three six-person task forces to investigate the same topics in depth, and later reassembled to hear summary reports. At the conclusion, it was agreed that some redefinition of the program can be expected.

The Division anticipates another meeting within the month to continue its discussions. In the future the Division plans to invite the participation of other LaGuardia departments.

AUDIO-TAPE SET-UP IN MATH LABORATORY

In response to the need of students who would like to advance in Mathematics, the Division of Natural Environment has installed an audio-tape setup in the Mathematics Laboratory for courses in college algebra and pre-calculus mathematics. These courses have been taught by Professor Lorraine Resnick and Professor Roy McLeod during the summer and fall quarters.

Students registered in these classes were able to go at their own pace, combining independent study in the lab. with classroom lectures and discussions. A number of students have been successful in completing both courses in one quarter.

TWENTY-FOUR COURSES OFFERED BY CONTINUING ED. DIVISION

Three courses in income tax preparation including one taught in Spanish are among 24 non-credit courses being offered at LaGuardia College during the winter term which begins December 11.

One of the income tax courses, called "Income Tax Preparation for Property Owners and Businessmen," will teach the essentials of organizing and keeping proper records as well as filling out required forms for the City, State, and Federal Tax returns. The course is being taught for people who operate small businesses, own rental property or who for other reasons file special tax schedules.

The other two tax courses are identical except one is taught in English and the other in Spanish. They cover the fundamentals of individual income tax preparation and include discussions of medical expenses, exemptions and deductions, capital gains and losses, sick pay, self-employment income, and how to avoid common errors.

All three of the courses run for eight sessions and the fee charged is $15 for each course.

Other courses being offered through the Division of Continuing Education include High School Equivalency Preparation; English as a Second Language; Buying Small Apartment Houses; Introduction to Book-keeping; Rapid Writing; Speed Reading; Introductory Stenography; Intermediate Stenography; Introduction to Typing; Advanced Typing; Typing for the Handicapped; Health Aide Training Program; Ceramics Workshop; Modern Dance; Introduction to Photography; Introductory Yoga; Needlepoint; Astronomy; Beginning Folk Guitar; Karate Techniques; Auto Repair and Intermediate Auto Repair.

FREE PARKING AT ARMY PICTORIAL CENTER FOR LAGUARDIA STAFF, FACULTY, STUDENTS

All members of the LaGuardia community may park free at the Army Pictorial Center beginning December 18, it has been announced by Mr. Al Longobardi, Director of Safety.

Longobardi said that the fee for parking behind the main building at 31-10 Thomson Avenue will remain at $25 for the winter quarter.

Concerning the Pictorial parking lot, Longobardi said that bus service from the Army Pictorial Center to the main campus will run on the half-hour beginning at 7:30 A. M. through 9:30 P. M. Monday through Friday.

Those interested in parking free must go to the College's business office on the 4th floor and show a validated ID card as well as the registration from the vehicle which will be parked at the Army Pictorial Center lot. The business office will give stickers to those with the proper credentials. The Army Pict. Cntr. stickers will be valid only in the Army Pictorial Center lot and may not be used to park at the main campus, according to Longobardi.

The normal procedure should be followed to obtain a $25 parking sticker for the main campus by showing an ID at business office.

Any questions should be directed to Mr. Longobardi at ext. 315.

ALL INCUMBENTS FROM LONG ISLAND CITY RE-ELECTED

All incumbent government officials who represent western Queens on the state and federal level were re-elected in the November election.

In the Congressional race, incumbent James J. Delaney of the 9th Congressional District (which includes most of Long Island City) ran virtually unopposed and drew more than 66,000 votes on the Democratic, Republican and Conservative lines. His opposition on the Liberal ticket was Ms. Loretta E. Gressey, who received only 4,440 votes. Delaney, who has held his seat for more than two decades, defeated New York City Councilman Thomas Manton in a hard fought primary earlier this year.

In the State Senate, Long Island City incumbents, Nicholas Ferraro (D. 14 Senate Dist.) and Martin J. Knorr (R. C. 15 Senate Dist.) both were re-elected. Ferraro won a relatively close race over F. Lanzi by 3,000 votes while Senator Knorr easily defeated Democrat F. Schmidt.
