Brooklyn College Dedicates $1,500,000 Student Center

Brooklyn College placed the cornerstone yesterday for a $1,500,000 student center.

Dr. Harry D. Gideonse, president of the college, officiated the dedication ceremony, which was attended by students, members of the faculty and of the Board of Higher Education, city officials and friends of the college.

The students voted in 1958 to build and maintain the center by raising fees $3.50 a semester. Faculty members, the Brooklyn College Alumni Association and others have assisted in the furnishing of the center.

The four-story, red brick building at Amersfort Place and Campus Road includes a sun lounge, dining room, snack bar, and various reading, game, conference and recreational rooms. It will open for general use today. Architects for the building were Chapman, Evans and Delehanty.
