

Farm Help From Brooklyn

This year's activities of the Brooklyn College farm labor project will get under way with the dispatch of approximately 150 students to Madison County, N. Y., to harvest the pea and bean crops. The students, according to an announcement by Dr. Harry D. Hildeonse, will be housed at the State Technical and Agricultural Institute in Morrisville and will be able to carry evening courses after their day's work.

Brooklyn College also has entered the war drive from another direction, the staff contributing 1,000 books and $300 to the needy University of Algiers at the request of Chester F. Williams, of the Overseas Information Program, Office of War Information.
