12-19-2016

If you think education is expensive, try ignorance.

Aldemaro Romero Jr.
CUNY Bernard M Baruch College

Recommended Citation
Romero, A. 2016. If you think education is expensive, try ignorance. The Edwardsville Intelligencer 19 December 2016, p. 3.
Dr. Aldeamaro Romero Jr.
Letters from Academia

If you think education is expensive, try ignorance.

That is what we mean by human and what defines us as human, for it is that which cherishes our children's future. And if we want to cherish our children and our grandchildren's future, so proudly, so we can be proud of ourselves as human beings, of the people we are, we must provide our children with the opportunity to decide who he or she wants to be, an artist, a biologist, or anything else.

Dr. Aldeamaro Romero Jr. is a teacher and college professor who has written extensively about the importance of education and its role in shaping individuals and society. His letter emphasizes the value of education, arguing that it is more expensive to lack education than to invest in it. He notes that education is essential for personal growth, intellectual development, and economic opportunities, and that it is a fundamental right that everyone should have access to.

The letter also highlights the importance of education in creating a better world, with a focus on social justice, equality, and sustainability. Romero Jr. argues that education is not just about acquiring knowledge, but also about developing critical thinking skills, problem-solving abilities, and a sense of responsibility for the world we live in.

In conclusion, Romero Jr. encourages readers to prioritize education and to recognize its value not just in terms of personal achievement, but also in terms of its impact on society and the world. He calls for continued investment in education and for society to support those who are striving to improve their lives through learning.