College enrollments becoming problematic.

Aldemaro Romero Jr.
CUNY Bernard M Baruch College

How does access to this work benefit you? Let us know!
Follow this and additional works at: https://academicworks.cuny.edu/bb_pubs

Recommended Citation

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Baruch College at CUNY Academic Works. It has been accepted for inclusion in Publications and Research by an authorized administrator of CUNY Academic Works. For more information, please contact AcademicWorks@cuny.edu.
Enrollment has become the main focus of attention for most public and some private institutions. This dependence on tuition is not a good sign since most of those providing the funding are students and their parents. Tuition payments are a major source of financial support for most public and some private institutions, and the student’s and parent’s debt is rising sharply while the number of Hispanic graduates is falling sharply. Institutions are committing economic suicide. And that is done primarily by focusing on short-term headcount, but also paying out-of-state and international students more than they are worth. It is the major source of their funding. And due to the result of a process that has been called the prioritization of short-term headcount. The result of this process is that students and their parents are paying more for tuition, and the institutions are seeing a decrease in the number of students attending them.

In terms of snow, there was 91 inches recorded for the year with four months having over 8 inches. The average speed wind gusts for 2016 was 2.4 mph.

Enrollment has become the main focus of attention for most public and some private institutions. This dependence on tuition is not a good sign since most of those providing the funding are students and their parents. Tuition payments are a major source of financial support for most public and some private institutions, and the student’s and parent’s debt is rising sharply while the number of Hispanic graduates is falling sharply. Institutions are committing economic suicide. And that is done primarily by focusing on short-term headcount, but also paying out-of-state and international students more than they are worth.

Turn of events

The Edwardsville Tiger Dance Team prepares to wrap up its performance Saturday morning during the Illinois Drill Team Association Regional Championship. A photo feature covering the event will appear in Saturday’s Intelligencer.