10-31-2017

The gap between faculty, presidents

Aldemaro Romero Jr.
CUNY Bernard M Baruch College

Recommended Citation
Romero, A. 2017. The gap between faculty, presidents. The Edwardsville Intelligencer 31 October 2017, p. 3
The gap between faculty, presidents

Conflict between faculty and administrators is not uncommon. In some cases, administrators may be seen as a 'chaos' or 'crisis' in the university, creating a sense of tension. This action places the board of trustees in a position of having to publicly back or fire the chief executive officer of the college, which can be challenging.

The first colleges and universities in Colonial America were under the strict control of the local boards of trustees that had appointed their presidents. The presidents were appointed by the college's local board of trustees, and in those days, presidents were dons posing for the future.

The St. Louis Board of Education is the governing body of the St. Louis Public Schools. The board is elected by the people of St. Louis. The board in turn hires the superintendent of schools, who is the chief executive officer of the school district. The superintendent is responsible for the operation of all schools in the district, including the elementary, middle, and high schools.

The GAP, or Group Against Privatization, is a local group that has been fighting against the privatization of the public schools in St. Louis. The group is dedicated to making the public schools in St. Louis better for all children.

Conflict between faculty and administrators

The gap between faculty and administrators is not uncommon. In some cases, administrators may be seen as a 'chaos' or 'crisis' in the university, creating a sense of tension. This action places the board of trustees in a position of having to publicly back or fire the chief executive officer of the college, which can be challenging.

The first colleges and universities in Colonial America were under the strict control of the local boards of trustees that had appointed their presidents. The presidents were appointed by the college's local board of trustees, and in those days, presidents were dons posing for the future.