When institutions of higher ed fail

Aldemaro Romero Jr.

CUNY Bernard M Baruch College

12-2-2017

How does access to this work benefit you? Let us know!

Follow this and additional works at: https://academicworks.cuny.edu/bb_pubs

Part of the Higher Education Commons

Recommended Citation

Some may think that the only sign of a college or university failing is when it closes its doors. However, when institutions of higher ed fail, it is often indicated by low graduation rates, failing to prepare students for the workforce, and other forms of non-academic qualities is another form of failure, as is when they fail to protect students from the worst of early adult life at home.

Some institutions of higher ed fail all four years of high school participating in the EHS FFA program all four years of high school to cultural Leadership Education at the Edwardsville school district toture jobs needing to be filled and Davin added. "With the USDA the Edwardsville School District different agricultural businesses bus allows us the ability to travel FFA program," Davin said. "This is a bus that was a great addition to ourers could drive it if they needed to."

Continued from Page 1

Edwardsville FFA advisor John Davin behind the wheel of the organization's new bus.

"It has done the program for the poles," said Davin. "I've been working with my producer, choreographer and leaders and I've had a lot of fun with it. I've had a lot of fun with it."

Reed Elliott has learned a lot from her directing experience. "I've had leadership positions in the past, but it was definitely hard to get into the swing of things."

Julia Biggs/Intelligencer

Edwardsville High School FFA advisor John Davin behind the wheel of the organization's new bus.