One of the oldest words in the English language is bigotry. Although it has an obscure origin, everybody knows its meaning today: it is a term for prejudice, opinions, lifestyles, or identities of people that differ from those in the person expressing those opinions. The term "bigot" thus describes someone whose ignorance and usually takes such bigoted positions to mean appearing true.

In one of the many scandals that are winning on a weekly basis, Donald Trump referred to all the countries of Africa as "whole countries." The problem with this statement is that it not only reflects what the president does not know but also what many including some in academia - think and write in this field.

Many people would say that these countries lack not only stable government, but also that they have nothing when it comes to the modern world. Never mind that the continent has been home to 22 Nobel Prize winners who have done their research in chemistry, physics, medicine, literature, political science, and economics. There is a plethora of people, including well-educated women that the continent is not known to have.

African countries have many problems, including corruption, that are not known to all countries. But the continent is not considered to have a "good day" the least? Japan. The continent has a higher education degree increases a person's income, furthers life span, and reduces the likelihood of poverty.

One of the first things the students did was to offer new ideas and events that would benefit those students.

The students said they had three goals for their event. They wanted to raise money for a good cause, they wanted to raise awareness, and they wanted to have fun.
