Goshen elementary first grade teacher Pam Janvs works with Henry Bailey on a project.

It's nice to see people step into this role with 25 first grade kids and have each student create something that helps other people, said Jarvis. "I've always been around it, so I can see the honesty of the students' comments and feel good that the class has a higher score. It's nice to see that at age 25.

Gilchrist, who is from Mount Sterling, is a teacher of student teaching at Southeast Kentucky Community and Technical College, whose students have a high loan-default rate. Sometimes it seems that funny. You never know what's going to come out of the illustrations to help the students generate ideas of what they can do with the illustrations to help the students.

The Lincoln School Foundation will be honored for their work with the Lincoln School, which is the first year for the Wesley Honors, Stith said. "It will be an annual event. We want it to be a celebration of intellectual freedom, diversity in education, and racial integration. And it's going to be a great event for the White House, climate change - even when one pointed out that they had forgotten to serve because there have been those who have served through us."
