MEDIA REPORT TO WOMEN

The mass media affects the lives of all of us—but especially young girls and boys. Publishing, print, broadcasting, schools, religion, the music industry — the media do not portray adequate options for girls and women.

Media Report to Women tells what they do, how they do it and where to find out more about it: courses on media; studies of advertising; formulating guidelines; monitoring media; negotiating with broadcasters; license challenges; non-sexist children's programs; women's publishing companies, film groups, and music recording companies; how to break down media stereotypes — all covered in the monthly issues of Media Report to Women.

And more: Media Report to Women prints the primary source materials that you need for your classes, for papers, speeches and presentations. Subscribe Today!

BRING THESE WOMEN INTO YOUR CLASSROOM...

with Three New Publications from The Feminist Press

High School Feminist Studies

Compiled by Carol Ahlum and Jacqueline Fralley
Edited with an introduction by Florence Howe

The first published collection of high school women's studies syllabi includes twenty-three innovative and challenging history, literature and interdisciplinary courses. An invaluable resource for planning a curriculum that includes women—their lives and their contributions. (192 pages / $5)

Strong Women

Edited by Deborah Silverton Rosenfelt

More than one hundred widely available paperbacks for the high school classroom are annotated in this brand-new bibliography of literature. Enlivened by photographs of women overlooked by the traditional male bias of contemporary texts. (64 pages / $1.95)

Women's Studies for Teachers and Administrators

Edited by Merle Froschl, Florence Howe, Sharon Kaylen

This packet of materials is a do-it-yourself model for organizing inservice education aimed at eliminating sexism in the school. Includes women's studies inservice course syllabi, samples of curriculum, list of key resource groups and an hour-long cassette containing edited speeches of four feminist educators. (48 pages, unbound, plus cassette / $10)
