The Jewish Studies Book Awards:

A Collection Development Strategy for Non-Sectarian Academic Libraries

Izabella Taler

Queens College Library, CUNY, Flushing, New York, USA

Abstract

Purpose – This paper aims to provide Jewish Studies collection development professionals in small and medium size academic libraries, with highly restricted budgets, with an alternate method of building quality collections.

Design/methodology/approach – Sources of Jewish Studies literary awards were identified and a detailed analysis of awarded books' subjects and the publishing sources was conducted.

Findings – Results show that awarded books cover a vast variety of subjects of interest to Jewish Studies collections. Since many of them are also published by academic presses, the use of identified Jewish Studies book award sources should be considered by bibliographers responsible for building Jewish Studies collections in non-sectarian college libraries with very limited budgetary resources.

Practical Implications – The “one stop” access to all award sources and awarded books provides an easy access to otherwise dispersed information.

Originality/value – The comprehensive list of awards, nominated and winning titles, as well as the subject analysis presented herein, is the first of its kind. This can be used by Jewish Studies bibliographers to build and improve their collections and can also serve as a model for building other interdisciplinary subject collections.

Keywords – Collection Development, Jewish Studies, Academic libraries, Collection study, Literary awards, Book awards

Paper Type – Research paper

INTRODUCTION

According to the Encyclopaedia Judaica the roots of Jewish Studies as an academic discipline in U.S. colleges and universities go back to 1818. The post-World War II rise in interest in Jewish Studies was followed by a significant growth in courses offered by non-sectarian colleges and universities across U.S. By the second part of the 20th Century, courses were taught in various departments such as philosophy, history, literature and languages by faculty in said departments. In response to a rise in student interest, colleges and universities began to establish Jewish Studies Programs and offer majors and minors in the discipline (Skolnik and Berenbaum, 2007).

According to the list provided by the Association for Jewish Studies [1] there are presently 179 North American colleges and universities offering degrees and/or programs in Jewish Studies. Collection development activities for academic libraries supporting Jewish Studies continue to be of interest and a challenge to subject bibliographers. An overview of the Library of Congress classification schedule clearly points to the multidisciplinary nature of “Jewish Studies” as it includes a vast variety of subjects ranging from religion, philosophy, history to folklore, literature, music and art. The latest Library and Book Trade Almanac's analysis of recent publishing activities indicates that despite a slight decline in book title output, the average price of books continues to rise (Barr and Harbison, p. 485). These issues present a serious dilemma for Jewish Studies bibliographers in small and medium size academic libraries faced with very limited acquisition budgets, but who need to build the best collections possible.

The Library and Information Studies literature lacks sufficient information on identifying sources for developing and maintaining Jewish Studies collections in academic libraries. Though there have been a few books published about Judaica library collections, their emphasis is on building such collections in synagogues, schools and community centers and therefore are of little relevance to non-sectarian college libraries. Singerman's nineteen year old article about the Jewish Studies collection development policy at University of Florida Libraries and Hass Weinberg's article about Judaica bibliographic control remain the lone examples of scholarship in the area (Singerman, 1991-1992; Hass Weinberg, 1991). However, neither article presents solutions to the very significant trend in loss of funding for monograph acquisitions and its impact on supporting Jewish Studies collections which cross multiple disciplines.

Due to the interdisciplinary nature of the Jewish Studies field, the standard bibliographic approach of utilizing reviewing media and faculty input produces mixed results. Relying on published book reviews is too cumbersome as many books are well-reviewed but the limited funding resources are insufficient to cover the cost of such books. Faculty input, though important, often focuses on a very particular field, primarily of interest to the individual making the request.

Johnson's standard text identifies the traditional collection development tools such as subject bibliographies, book reviews and publishers' catalogs, but it also points out that recent studies in this area have called for innovation, creativity and flexibility. Her discussion of tools utilized by collection development librarians identifies the common use of sources which "list books that have received awards, such as The Pura Belpré Awards and The Newbery and Caldecott Medal Books" (Johnson, 2009). Johnson's analysis and Dickstein's (2001) high regard for Jewish book awards sparked this author's interest in the use of Jewish Studies book awards as a collection development tool and was the motivating factor for undertaking such a study.

One can easily find a variety of existing book award lists, but most tend to focus on types of literature, e.g., science fiction, poetry, or specific subjects such as history, political science, etc. A detailed list of literary prizes focusing on Jewish themes, Jewish writers, Jewish culture, Yiddish language, awarded in U.S. and abroad by foundations, groups or individuals has long been overdue. Therefore, compiling a comprehensive guide to Jewish national and international book awards and investigation into its use as a collection development tool for building Jewish Studies collections in small and medium size non-sectarian academic libraries became this study's primary goal.

METHODOLOGY

Sources of Literary Awards

The use of book awards as a collection development tool necessitated identification of specific awards, awarded titles and the examination of awards' subject coverage and publishing sources. To accomplish this, the following award sources were consulted:

Association of American University Presses (AAUP) [2] According to this free source "books published by AAUP member presses regularly win awards from scholarly societies, regional institutions, and national literary organizations". Although not a comprehensive list, it offers a "partial list of prizes received by [AAUP] members, broken down by press" and in some instances it includes titles of finalists as well.

Library And Book Trade Almanac (a.k.a. The Bowker Annual) This basic library tool includes a "Distinguished Books" section and an annual list of "Literary Prizes" arranged alphabetically by award name. The list includes the name of the sponsoring organization, a very brief description of the award, and the winning titles for the specific year. Due to the lack of subject access, identification of awards related to Jewish Studies depends on the description provided by the almanac's publisher.

Novelist This subscription-based database allows users to "browse" all awards or search for award winners under age-related categories such as adults, teens, older kids, and younger kids. One can also limit to one of the 16 specific genres, including science fiction, romance, horror, graphic novels, fantasy, and "Christian fiction". Its coverage of awards related to Jewish Studies is incomplete as it includes some awards such as the Sydney Taylor Book Award, but not major awards such as the National Jewish Book Award. [3]

PROSE Awards Jointly presented by PSP/AAP (Professional and Scholarly Publishing, a Division of the Association of American Publishers), the annual PROSE Awards "recognize the very best in professional and scholarly publishing by bringing attention to distinguished books, journals, and electronic content in over 40 categories" [4] which represent a vast range of subjects dealing with arts, humanities, social sciences and science and medicine. Though not limited to Jewish Studies, its free access, announcement of both winners and finalists, and wide coverage of academic subjects is quite useful.

Resources For College Libraries (RCL) Promoting itself primarily as a "premier core list for academic libraries, RCL is the result of a unique collaboration between Choice, a publishing division of ACRL, and bibliographic authority Bowker." [5] With the overall interest in providing access to its core list of 65,000 recommended academic titles, the online version allows easy searching by award name and the award category. It includes approximately 94 awards and in addition to listing the winners, RCL also includes a very useful feature of "nominated" titles. The award category search is limited to general subject areas, such as fiction, humanities, social sciences, drama, etc. Although one can limit the search to interdisciplinary areas such as Latino Studies or African American Studies, Jewish Studies is not an option.

Selection of Awards

A detailed review of the above-mentioned sources followed and 31 awards specifically aimed at Jewish Studies subject areas were selected. Each award was researched for its origins, objectives and archival list of awarded titles. The "Awards Selected" section below provides a description of examined awards. A list of awarded book titles, winners and finalists, was compiled and presented in Appendix 1. The most current five years for each award were examined, with the cutoff date set at April 2010. In an attempt to provide readers with current information, titles of awarded books announced since then are listed in the Appendix 2.

Subject Identification

A very limited number of publications on the subject of Judaica classification exist. Some, such as Elazar's description of the system based on one developed by United Hebrew Schools in Detroit (Elazar and Elazar, 1997) or the 1971 report on the Harvard's own Judaica classification system, are of use in Judaica libraries, but they are of little practical use to bibliographers of small and medium size, non-sectarian U.S. college libraries (Harvard University. Library, 1971).

Since many academic libraries utilize the Library of Congress classification system for their collections, the LC system was chosen for this study. However, as this system does not identify Jewish Studies as a specific subject category, subject analysis necessitated a multi-step process. It involved matching of awarded titles with LC classification number and grouping them as either Jewish Studies or non-Jewish Studies subjects. To obtain the LC classification number, a title search in WorldCat, the "OCLC catalog of books and other materials in libraries worldwide" [6] for every book listed in Appendix 1 was completed. The LC classification number was then matched with the specific LC subject heading. Identification of subjects of interest to Jewish Studies was accomplished with the use of Classification Web's [7] tools such as "LC Subject Headings", "Browse Classification Schedules" and "Classification Search". Subject headings containing any root of words such as Jewish, Hebrew, Judaica, Yiddish, Bible, Holocaust, Israel, Palestine, and Jerusalem were extracted from Classification Web and identified specifically as Jewish Studies subjects; all other subjects were considered as non-Jewish Studies. The listing of all the identified Jewish Studies and non-Jewish Studies subjects is provided in Appendix 3.

Publishing sources

Since academic libraries are primarily interested in books published by university presses, an analysis of publishing sources of the awarded books was conducted. The publisher's name for each awarded book was identified as either commercial or university press. The number of books published by each publisher was calculated, and the university press publishers were further examined for their output of awarded books. A comparison of winners and finalists based on publishing sources follows in the "Results" section.

AWARDS SELECTED

AJL JUDAICA REFERENCE AWARD AND BIBLIOGRAPHY AWARD

The Association of Jewish Libraries offers two awards: the Judaica Reference Award (for Judaica reference books) and the Judaica Bibliography Award (for Judaica bibliographies). In 2010 the Association announced that the "Dating system changed...to reflect (the) year in which award is announced instead of year of publication. (The) award-giving did NOT skip a year", [8] therefore the tabulation of award subject categories does not include a listing for 2009 in this study. Also excluded is the listing for 2010 bibliography award as it was awarded to "body-of-work" rather than to a specific title.

ALBERTO BENVENISTE PRIZE (a k a Prix Alberto Benveniste)

Awarded by the Alberto Benveniste Center for Sephardic Studies and Culture, part of the Religious Studies Department of the École Pratique des Hautes Études, Sorbonne, Paris, "[i]ts aims are: (t)he encouragement of research and creative production related to the Judeo-Iberian world before and after the expulsion of the Jews from Spain in 1492 in the domains of language, culture, and history." [9]

According to the Center's website, "[t]he Alberto Benveniste Center grants, each year, two prizes, one for research and one for creative endeavor (referred to as literary award in this study), of 1,500 Euros each, for a work produced in France related to the subjects of interest for the Center." [10] Although the website refers to "two prizes", in 2005 there were three prizes, as two were awarded to two titles in the research category.

ANNE AND ROBERT COWAN WRITERS' FUND

Administered by the Jewish Community Federation, the award was "established in 2004 by Robert Cowan to recognize and award writers who have made an exceptional impact in the Bay Area (California) through their uniquely Jewish perspective...It is the intent of Mr. Cowan to reward the work of local writers who can benefit from both the publicity and award money without their being aware that they have been considered for the award. Therefore, there is no public nomination process." [11] Because specific titles were not identified, the award was excluded from this study's analysis. According to this author's correspondence with the organization, this award was not presented in the last two years, however there are plans to offer it again in 2010. The following is a list of winning authors to date: 2005: Jean Gonick (journalism); 2006: Julie Orringe (fiction writer); and 2007: Leo Litwak (short story collection).

BARON BOOK PRIZE (a.k.a. Salo Wittmayer Baron Book Prize)

Administered by the American Academy for Jewish Research, the $5,000 prize “is awarded annually to the author of an academic first book, in English, in any area of Jewish Studies. [T]he author must have received his or her Ph.D. degree within the previous seven years.” Though according to the AAJR’s website the 2010 prize should have been announced in the Spring of 2010, the decision has been postponed until December 2010. [12]

BIALIK PRIZE

A web search of this prize produces a mix of sites with the most comprehensive information provided by Wikipedia. [13] It states that the literary award is given by the municipality of Tel Aviv, Israel for significant accomplishments in Hebrew literature. The prize is named in memory of Hayyim Nahman Bialik. There are two separate prizes, one specifically for “Literature”, which is in the field of fiction, and the other for “Jewish thought”. Since specific titles are not identified, this prize was excluded from the overall subject analysis. The following is a list of winning authors for “Literature”: 2008: Oded Yehuda Burla, Israel Eliraz, Yeshayahu Koren; 2006: Ruth Almog, Raquel Chalfi, Uri Orlev; 2004: David Grossman, Haya Shenhav, Ephraim Sidon; and 2002: Haim Beerm, Maya Bejerano, Yoel Hoffmann, Miriam Roth.

DAYTON LITERARY PEACE PRIZE

“The Dayton Literary Peace Prize, inaugurated in 2006, is the first and only annual U.S. literary award recognizing the power of the written word to promote peace. The Dayton Literary Peace Prize invites nominations in adult fiction and nonfiction books published within the past year that have led readers to a better understanding of other cultures, peoples, religions, and political points of view. Both awards carry a $10,000 cash prize.” [14] Although the prizes are not directly related to Jewish Studies discipline, their emphasis on peace as the subject is of utmost importance to all Jewish Studies collections, and for that reason it is included in this work.

FENIA AND YAAKOV LEVIANT MEMORIAL PRIZE IN YIDDISH STUDIES (a.k.a. Leviant Memorial Prize)

Administered by the Modern Language Association (MLA), this “prize is offered each even-numbered year and is awarded alternately to an outstanding translation or an outstanding scholarly work in the field of Yiddish.” [15]

GOLDBERG PRIZE FOR JEWISH FICTION BY EMERGING WRITERS

Administered by the Foundation for Jewish Culture, a not-for-profit organization, the $2,500 Goldberg Prize for Jewish Fiction by Emerging Writers, “established in 1999 and supported through the Samuel Goldberg & Sons Foundation, is among the very first of its kind to highlight new works by contemporary writers exploring Jewish themes. The prize spotlights promising new talent, and is awarded to an American fiction writer for a first or second full-length work that was published in the previous calendar year.” [16]

HANDELSMAN PRIZE FOR JEWISH NONFICTION

According to the information posted on the Foundation of Jewish Culture’s 2008 news release, the Handelsman Prize for Jewish Nonfiction is sponsored by Foundation of Jewish Culture and Moment Magazine. The prize is often listed as Moment Magazine for Emerging Writer Awards, and is therefore listed herein under award’s, rather than the prize’s name. [17]

HAROLD U. RIBALOW PRIZE

According to Library and Book Trade Almanac this prize is sponsored by Hadassah Magazine “for Jewish fiction published in English”. Similar references to Hadassah Magazine are found throughout various websites. The magazine’s website carries no description of this award but, in response to this author’s email inquiry to the magazine’s staff, a list of prize winners was supplied by the magazine’s Editorial Assistant, Rachel Fyman Schwartzberg.

HELEN AND STAN VINE CANADIAN JEWISH BOOK AWARDS

Presented by the Koffler Centre of the Arts in Toronto, Canada, the annual Helen and Stan Vine Canadian Jewish Book Awards were established to recognize “excellence in contemporary Canadian writing that reflects Jewish themes and subjects...Prizes are given in History, Fiction, Yiddish, Youth Literature, Holocaust Literature, Biography & Memoir, Scholarship on a Jewish Subject, and Jewish Thought & Culture”. [18]

ISRAEL PRIZE

Established in 1953 and awarded by the State of Israel, the Israel Prize is “regarded as the state's highest honor”. The prize awarded includes subjects of interest to Jewish Studies, such as literature, theater, history, sociology and religion, and it should be reviewed by Jewish Studies bibliographers. [19] Since no specific titles were identified, this award was excluded from this study’s subject analysis.

JERUSALEM PRIZE

Offered by the Jerusalem International Book Fair, this is “[a]warded biennially to a writer whose works best express the theme of freedom of the individual in society.” (Bogart, 2010) Though not limited to Jewish Studies, the subject of the award is of interest to Jewish Studies bibliographers and therefore works of winning authors should be considered. The most recent winners were: Haruki Murakami (2009), Leszek Kolakowski (2007), Antonio Lobo Antunes (2005), Arthur Miller (2003), Susan Sontag (2001). Since no specific titles were identified, the winners of these awards were not included in the subject study.

J.I. SEGAL AWARDS (a.k.a. J.I. Segal Literary Awards)

Administered by the Jewish Public Library (“JPL”) in Montreal, Canada and funded by the J.I. Segal Cultural Foundation, this award was “established in 1968 to honour and perpetuate the memory of the great Yiddish-Canadian poet, J.I. Segal, and to foster Jewish cultural creativity in Canada.” Awards are given for 8 categories, with the first one, Dr. Hirsch and Dora Rosenfeld Prize for Yiddish and Hebrew Literature, carrying a $1,000 prize and remaining prizes of $500 each: “Prize in English Fiction and Poetry on a Jewish Theme, Prize in English Non-Fiction on a Jewish Theme, Prize in French Literature on a Jewish Theme, Prize in Translation of Book with a Jewish Theme, and Prize in Canadian Jewish Studies”. [20] Because the JPL site lacks archival information on winning titles, assistance in locating a list of past years’ winners was provided by Roxana Brauns, Head of Programming at JPL.

JORDAN SCHNITZER BOOK AWARDS

Founded in 2008 by the Jordan Schnitzer Family Foundation of Portland, Oregon, two $5,000 awards are presented annually by the Association for Jewish Studies (AJS). “The prizes recognize outstanding achievement in a total of eight categories - two per year - with subjects rotating over a four-year period. The eight categories are: Philosophy and Jewish Thought; Biblical Studies, Rabbinics, and Archaeology; Jewish Literature; Pre-modern Jewish History (antiquity through medieval era); Early Modern and Modern Jewish History; Social Science, Anthropology, Linguistics, and Folklore; Jews and the Arts (visual, performance, music); Gender Studies". [21] Since only winning titles are listed on the AJS's website, the titles of the "honorable mention" books for previous years were provided on request by the association's staff.

KORET JEWISH BOOK AWARDS and KORET YOUNG WRITER ON JEWISH THEMES AWARD (a.k.a. The Koret International Jewish Book Awards)

Established and administered since 1998 by the California-based Koret Foundation, this award provides "publication subsidies to first-time authors of original scholarly monographs in the field of Jewish [S]tudies". [22] Due to the fact that awards were last presented in 2005 - 2006 and have since been discontinued, the awarded titles have not been included in this study. However, since references to this award exist throughout online and print sources, the information about it might be of interest to Jewish Studies bibliographers.

MOMENT MAGAZINE EMERGING WRITER AWARDS

According to the posted information, this award was established in 2004 by Moment Magazine for fiction and nonfiction. The awards "seek out talented writers who have published at least one book and whose books confront themes that are of interest to millions of Jewish readers. An emerging writer is defined as someone who: has not yet received widespread recognition, has not yet won a major literary award, can be of any age." [23] Though the Handelsman Prize for Jewish Nonfiction, mentioned above, is sometimes identified with this award, Moment Magazine's website does not offer any additional information regarding such award.

NATIONAL JEWISH BOOK AWARDS

The National Jewish Book Awards is a program of The Jewish Book Council, a not-for-profit organization "exclusively committed to promoting and advocating for Jewish literature." Established in 1948, it is "the longest running North American awards program of its kind in the field of Jewish literature and is recognized as the most prestigious. The awards, presented by category, are designed to give recognition to outstanding books, to stimulate writers to further literary creativity and to encourage the reading of worthwhile titles." [24] Though for most part, the award is simply referred to as the "National Jewish Book Awards", citations to specifically named awards under this umbrella phrase show up throughout print and online sources. The following are the named awards: Jewish Book of the Year Award (Everett Family) for nonfiction, Celebrate 350 Award for American Jewish Studies, Simon & Shulamith (Sofi) Goldberg for Biography, JJ Greenberg Memorial Award for Fiction, Gerrard and Ella Berman Memorial Award for History, Louis Posner Memorial Award for Illustrated Children's Book, Ronald S. Lauder Award for Eastern European Studies, Dorothy Kripke for Jewish Family Literature, Dorot Foundation Award for Modern Jewish Thought, Foundation for Jewish Culture's Goldberg Prize for Fiction, Nahum M. Sarna Memorial Award for Scholarship, Mimi S. Frank Award for Sephardic Culture, Barbara Dobkin Award for Women's Studies, and JDC-Herbert Katzki Award for writing based on Archival Material. The awards which have not yet been named cover the following subject areas: Anthologies and Collections; Children's and Young Adult Literature; Contemporary Jewish Life and Practice; Education and Jewish Identity; Holocaust; Poetry; and Visual Arts. [25]

REFORM JUDAISM PRIZE FOR JEWISH FICTION

Established in 2003, this award was created to "encourage young Jewish fiction writers. To be eligible, writers must be under the age of 45 and have published a novel or short story collection on a Jewish theme. To qualify for the prize, the writer must have authored a novel or collection of short stories on a Jewish theme published originally in English in the United States or Canada. Additionally, the writer must not have received a major book award, such as the Pulitzer Prize, Booker Award, or National Book Award". The winning author receives a $5,000 award as well as a feature in the magazine "Reform Judaism". The last awarded prize was in 2008 and the prize is presently on hold. [26]

RISA DOMB/PORJES PRIZE

This award, "sponsored by the Porjes Trust in association with the Times Literary Supplement and administered by the Jewish Book Council in conjunction with the (London based) Society of Authors", [27] is named in memory of Dr. Risa Domb, who taught Hebrew at the University of Cambridge. The £2,000 prize is awarded triennially to promote recognition of Hebrew-English translators.

RODDA BOOK AWARD

Sponsored by the Church and Synagogue Library Association (CSLA), this award, "named for lifetime CSLA member, Dot Rodda, recognizes a book which exhibits excellence in writing and has contributed significantly to congregational libraries through promotion of spiritual growth. The award is given to books for adults, young adults, and children on a three-year-rotational basis." [28]

SAMI ROHR PRIZE FOR JEWISH LITERATURE

Established in 2006 by the family of Sami Rohr to honor his "love of Jewish writing", the prize is administered by the Jewish Book Council. The "annual award recognizes the unique role of contemporary writers in the transmission and examination of Jewish values, and is intended to encourage and promote outstanding writing of Jewish interest. Each year, the prize of $100,000 will aim to reward an emerging writer whose work has demonstrated a fresh vision and evidence of future potential. Recipients must have written a book of exceptional literary merit that stimulates an interest in themes of Jewish concern...Fiction and non-fiction books will be considered in alternate years." [29] In addition there is the Sami Rohr Prize Choice Award which is awarded annually. In 2010 the Choice Award was not awarded; the award money was combined and shared by two winners of the Sami Rohr Prize for Jewish Literature. [30]

SAPIR PRIZE

The Sapir Prize of Israel is an "annual literary award presented for a work of fine literature. The prize is awarded by Mifal Hapayis (Israel's state lottery), and is a part of the organization's cultural initiatives. It carries the name of Pinhas Sapir, the late Israeli Minister of Finance, and was first awarded in 2000". Awarded books are either written or translated into Hebrew. [31]

SAUL VIENER BOOK PRIZE

Sponsored by The American Jewish Historical Society (AJHS) and named in honor of its past president, the $1,000 prize is for books which deal with American Jewish history. According to AJHS, "works in literature, sociology, political science, and other fields do not qualify, nor do historical studies of Jews outside of the United States. In order to be considered, books have to be original work in English and not anthologies or other edited works." The AJHS website identifies it as the biannual prize and "therefore books published in the last two years will be considered in 2011". [32] Inconsistencies were found on the society's website regarding their winning titles and award dates. One such example is the title Lillian Wald: A Biography published in 2008, but identified as 2005 – 2006 runner up.

SHOLEM ALEICHEM PRIZE

According to the 2009 news announcement on the website for the JTA, The Global News Service of the Jewish People, this prize will be awarded by the Ukrainian government “once every three years, beginning in 2009, for achievements in literature and culture. The prize, awarded on the March 2 birthday of the writer, includes a cash award of about $900.” [33] Information recently obtained by the author indicates that the presentation of this award has been postponed until 2011.

SIDNEY AND HADASSAH MUSER SUBVENTION PRIZE

The Foundation for Jewish Culture “awards a $3,000 grant on a biannual basis to support the publication of an outstanding first book project by a recent Ph.D. (Applicants must have completed their Ph.D.s within six years of application.) The prize recognizes the originality, scope, and scholarly rigor of any first book published within approved categories related to Jewish [S]tudies.” [34]

SOPHIE BRODY AWARD

Administered by the Reference and User Services Association (RUSA), a division of ALA, the Sophie Brody Award, funded by the Arthur Brody and the Brodart Foundation, has been in existence since 2006. It “is given to encourage, recognize and commend outstanding achievement in Jewish literature.” [35]

SOUTHERN JEWISH HISTORICAL SOCIETY BOOK PRIZE

This $500 book prize is awarded “every four years for the book making the most significant contribution to the field of southern Jewish history.” [36]

SYDNEY TAYLOR BOOK AWARD

Established in 1968 by the Association of Jewish Libraries, the Shirley Kravitz Children's Book Award was renamed in 1978 to its current name. In addition to name change, the award has undergone changes in number and categories of annual awards as well as its dating system. It is now “presented annually to outstanding books for children and teens that authentically portray the Jewish experience...[It is] named for the year in which the prize [is] presented, for a book published during the previous year. Gold medals are presented in three categories: Younger Readers, Older Readers, and Teen Readers. Honor Books are awarded silver medals, and Notable Books are named in each category.” [37]

THREE PERCENT BEST TRANSLATED BOOK AWARD

The prize, in existence since 2007, is sponsored by the University of Rochester, N.Y. Since the award is not limited to Jewish Studies, it was not included in the subject analysis. However, because the 2010 winner was a book translated from Hebrew “The Confessions of Noa Weber”, this award might be of interest to Jewish Studies bibliographers. [38]

WASHINGTON INSTITUTE BOOK PRIZE

The Institute awards three prizes annually for “new books that have illuminated the Middle East for American readers.” Since the subject of the award is not limited to Jewish Studies discipline, the winning titles were not included in the subject analysis. However, Jewish Studies bibliographers should be aware of this award due to its subject matter. For example, the 2009 prize winner was “A Safe Haven: Harry S. Truman and the Founding of Israel.” [39]

WINGATE LITERARY PRIZE (a.k.a. JQ-Wingate Prize or Jewish Quarterly -Wingate Prize)

Created in 1977 by Harold Hyam Wingate, this £4,000 prize is for “Jewish and non-Jewish authors resident in the UK, British Commonwealth, Europe and Israel....Books submitted must be in English, either originally or in translation.” In addition to winning titles, the site includes a “shortlist” of nominated titles. [40]

FINDINGS

The 31 awards presented in the “Awards Selected” section were the base for subject and publisher analysis. This number was further reduced to 24 as some of the awards are either no longer or not yet active (e.g., Koret Prize and Sholem Aleichem Prize), some only recognize an author rather than a specific title (e.g., Israel Prize and Jerusalem Prize) and some are marginally connected with this discipline (e.g., Dayton Prize or Washington Prize). The names of the selected 24 awards with the titles of awarded books are identified in Appendix 1. Whenever possible, the award’s exact phrase was used, and therefore titles listed under “Finalist” include those identified as “honorable”, “notable”, “nominee”, “short listed”, “choice award” or “runner up”. Each title is followed by a publisher’s name and the LC classification number.

A numerical summary of all the winners and finalists is presented in Table I. The list of 519 titles includes 252 winners and 267 finalists. Though none of the awards can compete with the large number of books (258) awarded by The National Jewish Book Awards, the next highest group of awarded books includes Wingate Literary Prize (31 books), Helen and Stan Vine Canadian Jewish Book Awards (25 books), Sami Rohr Prize for Jewish Fiction and Sophie Brody Award (20 books each). With the exclusion of 2010, the current award year, the total number of awarded books has risen yearly from 81 awards in 2005 to 107 in 2009. On average, from 2004 and 2009, 40 winners and 41 finalists were awarded annually.

The analysis of subject coverage of the awarded books was reduced to 414 titles. This number reflects the elimination of 63 duplicate titles (those receiving multiple awards) and 56 books identified as “juvenile”. Elimination of children’s books from this study was done on the premise that these books are not of primary interest to academic libraries.

All represented subjects were cumulated and categorized according to Library of Congress subject headings. Based on the employed methodology, all subject headings were identified and grouped as either belonging to Jewish Studies or Non-Jewish Studies. The results are presented in Figure 1. There are 231 titles with Jewish Studies and 183 titles with Non-Jewish Studies subject headings. Though in total they cover 22 general subject categories, some subjects, such as psychology, medicine, political science, and anthropology, are not represented by the awarded books. The Jewish Studies subjects with strongest representation by the awarded books are History (67 titles), Judaism (60 titles), and Language and Literature (41 titles), and the top three categories for Non-Jewish Studies subjects are Language and Literature (111 titles), History (26 titles), and Social Sciences (14 titles).

In reviewing the total number of books in the Language and Literature subject category, it is important to point out that the LC classification schedule for areas specifically dealing with individual authors such as English Literature – Individual Authors (PR5921-6125), or American Literature – Individual Authors (PS3511-3623) lacks any additional identification such as “Jew” or “Jewish”, and therefore, based on this study’s methodology these subjects were categorized as “Non-Jewish Studies” subjects. However, a more detailed subject analysis of some of the literature titles counted in this category, shows that the subject matter of some of these books can clearly be considered as Jewish Studies. For example, the following three books fall into this broad LC subject category of Literature-Individual Authors and will certainly be of interest to Jewish Studies collections: Kalooki Nights (about Jews in Great Britain), Plot Against America (about Anti-Semitism), and World to Come (about Jewish families). With this in mind, to attain a more balanced view, it might be useful to eliminate the category of Language and Literature from the analysis. Doing so would result in the following new totals: 190 titles with Jewish Studies and 72 titles with Non-Jewish Studies Subject Headings.

Publisher Analysis

The review of publishing sources was restricted to all award books with the exception of duplicate titles. The analysis of publishers' names for the 456 books shows that the award books were published by a total of 215 publishers with 178 non-university presses publishing 319 titles and 37 university presses publishing 137 titles. The data in Table II shows that the university presses with the highest published number of awarded books are Yale University Press, Princeton University Press, Brandeis University Press, Cambridge University Press, and Oxford University Press.

Table III provides an overview of all 519 awarded books and identifies the number and the percentage of university press books for each of the 24 awards. Although not indicated by the award policies, four prizes awarded only university press books specifically, Baron Book Prize, Jordan Schnitzer Book Award, Saul Viener Book Prize, Sidney and Hadassah Musher Subvention Prize and Southern Jewish Historical Society Book Prize.

CONCLUSION

This multi-faceted study researched, identified and compiled a comprehensive list of book awards and prizes in the field of Jewish Studies. The results showed an existence of a vast variety of available awards which cover the Jewish Studies discipline. The analysis showed extensive subject coverage of the awarded books, and a strong presence of university presses among the publishers of winning books. The paper demonstrated that the Jewish book awards can easily be used as an alternate collection development tool for building or evaluating Jewish Studies collections. The Jewish Studies bibliographers in small and medium size non-sectarian academic libraries with limited budgets, can successfully integrate this approach in their efforts to best support the library needs of students and faculty.
