What would a mother know about war?

Everything, says Jain Sherrard, for “raising children is like combat — mothers and babies both fighting to come out alive.”

Like the classic crusader, a mother embarks on a pilgrimage from which she must emerge a true warrior. Her task is not to conquer but to liberate. Her reward is freedom — for herself and her children to lead equally rich lives.

For mothers and mothers-to-be, Sherrard provides insight into the difficult, but possible, art and combat of mothering. For fathers, as well as educators and students of women’s and family studies, she describes the full spectrum of the mothering experience:

“As a psychologist interested in the development of effective family systems, I am delighted and impressed with the insights of Jain Sherrard. As a parent, I was moved and touched. . . . A great book.”
— Allen E. Ivey, Director, Counseling Psychology Program, University of Massachusetts, Amherst

A Zora Neale Hurston Reader

Edited by Alice Walker
Introduction by Mary Helen Washington
$16.95 cloth; $6.95 paper; 320 pages
ISBN 0-912670-56-8 (cloth)

Zora Neale Hurston is the intellectual and spiritual foremother of a whole generation of Black women writers. This volume—the first anthology of Hurston’s work ever published—contains a wide range of fiction, journalism, folklore, and autobiography written between 1926 and 1950. Commentary by Mary Helen Washington and Alice Walker provides fascinating insights into Hurston, as well as into America’s cultural and social history.

"Zora Neale Hurston was a Black woman who delighted in the complexity and spirit of Black people and rendered their lives superbly . . . one of the greatest writers of our time."—Toni Morrison, author of Song of Solomon.

"Through Hurston, the soul of the Black South gained one of its most articulate interpreters. The aspirations and fears of her eloquent characters are startlingly contemporary."—New York Times Book Review.
