WOMEN’S STUDIES PROGRAMS and CENTERS FOR RESEARCH ON WOMEN—1981

For the first time, we are making available in a single format, and for future distribution, the WOMEN’S STUDIES PROGRAM list and the annotated list of CENTERS FOR RESEARCH ON WOMEN. All correspondence about the listing of Centers for Research on Women (corrections, additions, etc.) should be addressed to Florence Howe, Editor, Women's Studies Quarterly; all correspondence about the listing of Women’s Studies Programs (corrections, additions, etc.) should be addressed to Elaine Reuben, National Coordinator, NWSA.

Most of the Women’s Studies Programs listed below are interdisciplinary; i.e., they combine courses in literature, language, or culture with work in sociology, anthropology, economics, political science, history, philosophy, psychology, biology and related fields. Many offer interdisciplinary courses as well as internships. Some programs offer minors (denoted by Min) or graduate minors (denoted by Grad Min), or certificate (denoted by Cert); others offer major concentrations in women’s studies or award A.A., B.A., M.A., or Ph. D. degrees. Programs listed without a specific label offer or coordinate elective courses. Where no coordinator, director, or chairperson is listed, the program may be in the process of organization, or it may have chosen to function through a committee, or to rotate the administrative function.

This list is maintained and published as an educational service of the National Women's Studies Association (NWSA, University of Maryland, College Park, MD 20742) and of the Women's Studies Quarterly (The Feminist Press, Box 334, Old Westbury, NY 11568). Compilers for 1981 were Elaine Reuben for NWSA and Florence Howe for the Women Studies Quarterly. For additional copies of this list, send $1.50 in check or money order to NWSA or the Women Studies Quarterly.

University of Arizona
Southwest Institute for Research on Women (SIROW)
TUCSON, AZ 85724
Director: Myra Dinnerstein
SIROW is a regional center designed to serve scholars in Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado, and Utah. Its purposes are to organize seminars and workshops that promote interdisciplinary and collaborative work and set research priorities for the region; to provide a central clearinghouse for information on research projects and publish a newsletter to disseminate the information; to provide opportunities for younger scholars, including graduate students, to pursue research on women by offering them access to resources not available on their own campuses and contact with scholars throughout the region; and to bring to the Institute noted scholars to present their research findings and work with regional scholars.

University of California, Berkeley
Center for the Study, Education, and Advancement of Women
112 T-9 Building
Berkeley, CA 94720
Director: Margaret B. Wilkerson
The Center for the Study, Education, and Advancement of Women (formerly the Center for the Continuing Education of Women) is an academic unit on the Berkeley campus, established in 1972 specifically to expand research, education, and career opportunities for women. With funds from the Ford Foundation, the Center has established a new research component, which sponsors a Research Fellows Program, faculty projects, colloquia, conferences, and publications on the theme, "Women and Their Work: Intersections of the Marketplace and the Household." The Center also sponsors a variety of support and enrichment programs for students, faculty, and staff, and maintains a referral service and a non-circulating library. The Center works collaboratively with other academic units on the campus, especially the Women's Studies Program.

Center for Women Policy Studies
2000 P Street, NW, Suite 508
Washington, DC 20036
Director: Jane R. Chapman
The Center does extensive and detailed work in three main areas: (a) the economic status of women, including studies of credit, the legal and economic impact of marital status (right-to-support, domicile, alimony, child support, inheritance tax, no-fault divorce), and sex discrimination in the social security system; (b) women and criminal justice, including a survey of rape victim assistance nationwide, policy and program development for victims of intrafamily violence and sexual assault, and programming for female offenders; and (c) employment discrimination, particularly in policing and the military.

CUNY Graduate School and University Center
Center for the Study of Women and Sex Roles
33 West 42nd St
New York, NY 10036
Director: Mary Brown Parlee
The Center fosters a high level of interdisciplinary scholarly research and graduate education through conferences, seminars, lectures, and course work. Its research and course-related interests include the psychology of sex roles, cross-cultural studies of sex role learning, women and the law, women's history, sex biases and stereotypes in education, and women in the arts.

Columbia University
Program on Sex Roles and Social Change
Center for the Social Sciences
420 West 118th Street
New York, NY 10027
Co-Directors: Jonathan R. Cole, Cynthia F. Epstein
The Program facilitates empirical research among social scientists in four main areas: (a) the labor force, (b) the family, (c) the law, and (d) higher education. It has a special interest in two emerging areas in the sex-roles field: international comparisons and the interaction between social science research and the law. The Center's activities have stimulated interdisciplinary communication among scholars within the university community, and plans include expansion of this network to the larger intellectual community of New York.

Cornell University
Institute for Education and Research on Women and Work
New York State School of Industrial and Labor Relations
Metropolitan District
7 East 43rd Street
New York, NY 10017
Director: Barbara M. Wertheimer
The Institute is concerned with problems related to blue-collar and trade-union women, and is the only center with this orientation. It has a strong education and training component, focusing on applied research and the development of programs that help working women attain their educational and career goals and assume leadership positions in labor and community organizations. The Center publishes materials and maintains a clearinghouse of information about working women.

Higher Education Research Institute
924 Westwood Boulevard, Suite 850
Los Angeles, CA 90024
Vice President: Helen S. Astin
HERI carries out empirical research in all sectors of postsecondary education, emphasizing the broad areas of academic administration and institutional management, federal and state financial aid programs, the use of education in careers, and educational equity for women. Because it is concerned with the development and use of talent, HERI focuses a part of its research on the relationship of postsecondary education to the labor market and on improved job market forecasting. HERI encourages multidisciplinary interchange and variety in research modes and has a particular expertise in research that utilizes a longitudinal approach.

The Institute for Research in History
432 Park Avenue South
New York, NY 10016
Executive Director: Marjorie Lightman
The Institute for Research in History, an independent community of scholars engaged in historical research, writing, and discussion, aims to demonstrate and affirm the vitality of historical studies. Its dedication to scholarship of the highest order includes not only the continued investigation of traditional areas but also the study of groups and activities that have been traditionally ignored or underestimated by historians. The Institute has a special commitment to the promotion of scholarship among women historians and to the support of research in women's history. The Institute organizes conferences, seminars, and lectures, and undertakes projects designed to foster historical understanding and perspective among a wider public. In association with Haworth Press, the Institute sponsors a publishing program that includes two quarterly journals, Trends in History, and Women and History.

International Center for Research on Women

Address: 1010 16th Street, NW, Third Floor
City: Washington, DC 20036
Director: Mayra Buvinic

The International Center is one of two research centers concerned with the impact of the development process on the roles and status of women. The Center conducts work aimed at not only understanding and improving the lives of women in developing countries but accelerating the socio-economic development of those countries by including women as active participants. Projects include research on women-headed households, poverty as a women's issue, the impact of migration on family structures, and the conditions of rural women in several countries.

University of Michigan

Center for Continuing Education for Women

Address: 328-330 Thompson Street
City: Ann Arbor, MI 48109
Director: Jean W. Campbell

CCEW has three interrelated functions: service, advocacy, and research. Since 1964, the Center has offered a wide range of direct and indirect services to help women (and men) whose education is or may be complicated by family responsibilities and/or the need to work. The Center's research program is currently focusing on the transition to work, the balancing of work and family commitments, and the Center's own impact on the well-being of 1,135 women of varying ages who used its services from 1964 to 1973. Center data are used not only for research but as a basis for planning and program development. In addition, graduate students use the information to study such topics as achievement orientation in young mothers, women in sciences and mathematics, and the educational choices of older women.

University of Michigan

Panel Study of Income Dynamics

Institute for Social Research

Address: 328-330 Thompson Street
City: Ann Arbor, MI 48106
Director: James N. Morgan

The Institute's Panel Study of Income Dynamics is an extensive investigation of the causes and consequences of people's changing economic fortunes over time. The study follows 5,000 families (17,000 individuals), illuminating a variety of social issues relating to women's family roles. Findings over the nine years thus far have been presented in six volumes intended for economists, demographers, sociologists, social policy makers, and others interested in poverty, job discrimination, and the social economics of the U.S. family.

Ohio State University

Center for Human Resource Research

National Longitudinal Surveys of Labor Force Behavior

Address: 328-330 Thompson Street
City: Columbus, OH 43201
Director: Michael E. Borus

The Center is concerned with a wide range of contemporary problems associated with human resource development, conservation, and utilization, and has acquired prominence in labor market research and planning. The largest project of the Center, the National Longitudinal Surveys of Labor Force Behavior, has been conducted since 1965 for the Department of Labor. Sample data are collected on a continuing basis for four groups within the U.S. as of 1965: men 45-59 years of age, women 30-44 years of age, and young men and women 14-24 years of age. Data tapes as well as monographs and special reports, are available for public use.

Rutgers University

Eagleton Institute of Politics

Address: 328-330 Thompson Street
City: New Brunswick, NJ 08903
Director: Ruth B. Mandel

The Center specializes in research about women's participation in the U.S. political process and is the only research, education, and service center of its kind. Its purpose is not only to develop information but to work toward increasing women's effective involvement in public life. Activities include studies of the status, problems, and trends of women's political participation; seminars, workshops, and courses designed to examine, encourage, and assist women in politics; collection and dissemination of facts, figures, reports, and analysis about women's public roles; and conferences to stimulate research and the exchange of ideas among academicians and practitioners.

Women's Studies Quarterly 9:2 (Summer 1981)
Rutgers University
Women's Studies Institute
132 George Street
New Brunswick, NJ 08903
Director: E. Ann Kaplan

As the center for research in women's studies at Rutgers, the Institute includes under its auspices the Training Institute for Sex Segregation in the New Jersey and New York State high schools. The Institute is at present administering several large grants, externally funded, including one from the Women's Educational Equity Act Program to develop a coeducational physical education curriculum for the sixth through eighth grades. The Institute also runs lecture series and supports women's studies programs on various Rutgers campuses.

Simmons College
Institute for Case Development and Research Graduate Programs in Management
409 Commonwealth Avenue
Boston, MA 02215
Administrative Director: Bonnie Marrett

The Institute exists primarily to develop for pedagogical use in graduate management programs cases which focus on women managers. In addition to illustrating administrative problems, these new cases show how women deal with career problems and how their attitudes, backgrounds, and managerial styles differ from those of male managers. They also provide role models for pioneering women management students. The Institute will use a published collection of cases to conduct Summer Institutes for faculty and provide instruction in case method teaching.

Stanford University
Center for Research on Women
Serra House
Stanford, CA 94305
Director: Myra Strober

CROW sponsors research on the changing roles of women and men undertaken by Stanford faculty within their own disciplines and in interdisciplinary teams, and facilitates the sharing of findings with students and interested members of the wider community. The research program includes research scholars, seed money research grants, the Center's group activities, research seminars, and a research conference. A major study under way is concerned with the biology and psychology of sex differences. The educational program includes course development, a lecture series, and other public events.

Urban Institute
Program of Policy Research on Women and Families
2100 M Street, NW
Washington, DC 20037
Director: June A. O'Neil

The Program represents a significant extension of the research agenda of the Institute to cover new developments in sex roles and life styles. Objectives are to analyze and interpret ongoing changes in women's aspirations and status, and the implications of these changes for individuals and social institutions; to identify and anticipate the range of public policy options for responding to these changes; and to provide a conceptual and factual basis for choosing among the alternatives. Projects range from the tax treatment of two-earner families to the effects of recession on the employment of women and the need for new financial arrangements for supporting children in cases of divorce, separation, or out-of-wedlock birth.

Wellesley College
Center for Research on Women
828 Washington Street
Wellesley, MA 02181
Director: Laura Lin

The Center works with Wellesley College and the Higher Education Resource Services (HERS) on innovative curriculum projects in higher education; and with the Federation of Organizations for Professional Women, in Washington, on the planning and dissemination of research. Three main areas are addressed: (a) employment, (b) family and work, and (c) higher education. Research is directed toward understanding the link between individuals and the functioning of institutions and social relationships. A central concern is to ensure that the results of research reach those who may act upon them.

University of Wisconsin
Women's Studies Research Center
Madison, WI 53706
Director: Elaine Marks

The Center links other centers and institutes on the Madison campus, isolated scholars engaged in research on women, and women's community groups and state agencies whose mission is to transform research into policy. Activities include monthly colloquia, grant-writing competitions, and celebrations. Research efforts focus on four area: (a) women's studies pedagogy, (b) the concept of motherhood, (c) women and health, and (d) theoretical and methodological debate between traditional approaches to the social sciences and humanities and more recent considerations of what constitutes knowledge.

The Women's Research and Education Institute of the Congresswomen's Caucus
400 South Capitol Street
Washington, D.C. 20003
Executive Director: Betty Parsons Dooley

The Women's Research and Education Institute of the Congresswomen's Caucus (WREI) was established in 1977 to meet Caucus research and information needs on women's issues. Responses to short-term research requests from the Caucus include an evaluation of a proposed "women's economic equity" legislative package, an assessment of the impact on women of the new Administration's proposed federal budget, and a survey of the legislative priorities of Black women's organizations. In cooperation with the Women's Studies Program and Policy Center of George Washington University, WREI directs the Congressional Fellowship Program on Women and Public Policy, a program that places female graduate students in Congressional offices. Under a grant from the Ford Foundation, WREI has begun to coordinate basic and policy research on women's issues that can be used by policymakers to identify areas of needed legislation and to formulate policies that enhance opportunities for women. In this context, WREI will function as a channel of information from research and policy centers around the country to members of Congress and other policy makers.
