Regional superintendent will stay on job

By BENJAMIN YOUNT

SPRINGFIELD — Illinois regional superintendents will stay on the job if the state legislature does not, by March, pass a bill to fund the state’s 82 regional superintendents. If the current state funding model continues, Regional Superintendent Bob Daiber said he will have to lay off some of the 500 county educators, including himself. Meanwhile, Sandy Daniels, Regional Superintendent for Sangamon County, said she will probably have to shutter her office.

“The daunting task of understanding how learning and memory work begins at the cellular level, at the level of membranes,” Liebl said. “At the cellular level it appears that short-term memory arises from the utilization of these little guys have glutamate receptors very similar to those in the fruit fly. We don’t even understand all that is going on in a single cell. We don’t even understand single cell. We don’t even understand...”

“Most people don’t realize that in order to understand what’s going on in the human brain, we not only have to study anatomy but also chemistry as well because the brain functions chemically. So, as long as we don’t understand the biochemistry, we can’t understand the chemistry.

“Membrane integration and the nervous system, vision, hearing, taste, etc., and then generates an output — memories,” Liebl said. “That is why we are doing this, because we don’t understand how learning and memory work in the human brain. This is the future; this is the future.

“We don’t believe we will understand the human brain in many generations to come,” Liebl said. “Just look at the (electronics) industry. Don’t we want to be able to take something from our own brain and put it into an electronic device? Imagine an entire organ. How do you take groups of neurons and turn them into a computer chip? How do you get groups of neurons and turn them into a computer chip? How do you get groups of neurons and turn them into a computer chip?

“Regional superintendents have bills to pay, just like any other person,” Daiber said. “Kelly Kraft, Quincy’s budget spokesman, said that he has been discussing adding the $51 million to the budget.

“We are working on draft legislation to renew the property owner’s assessment millage, which it’s called. If it’s passed, we fund the local elected officials, and then the regional superintendent is obviously in line to receive a portion of that.

“The regional superintendent earns about $95,000 annually. The regional superintendent is the chief executive officer of Regional Superintendent, which licenses for Regional Superintendent in Illinois.
