Chicago prepares to face G-8 protesters

CHICAGO (AP) — Outlawed a bit too late to do the police much good, the G-8 is a group of countries that meets every three years in high finance zones.

What the police did not know, what the G-8 did not know, was that we the people, we the people who are going to be the next generation of the world, we the people who are going to make the world a better place, we the people who are going to make the world a just and fair place, we the people who are going to make the world a sustainable place, we the people who are going to make the world a place where everyone can live in peace and prosperity, we the people who are going to make the world a place where everyone can live in freedom and democracy, we the people who are going to make the world a place where everyone can live in justice and equality, we the people who are going to make the world a place where everyone can live in love and happiness, we the people who are going to make the world a place where everyone can live in peace and prosperity, we the people who are going to make the world a place where everyone can live in freedom and democracy, we the people who are going to make the world a place where everyone can live in justice and equality, we the people who are going to make the world a place where everyone can live in love and happiness.

When reminded of the still-powerful imag- enes of the violent confrontations between police and protesters at the 1968 Democratic National Convention, Wesley thanked gods any comparisons between Chicago then and Chicago now.

“This is not 1968. I think that’s an important lesson,” he said. “The risks and risks for police, for protesters, for the whole community are much lower than they were in 1968.”

Wesley said he has no problem with the rally sites and protest routes it agrees to.

“To head off possible confrontations, Felicia Hughes’ surgeon, Dr. Randy Rogalsky, testified that Hughes had a 33 mm bullet in his body. Hughes was shot in the throat by an officer who was trying to subdue him. Hughes was taken to the hospital where he underwent surgery. Hughes was in a coma for several days before he died. His family was notified and they came to his bedside and said their final goodbyes. Hughes was laid to rest on January 27th.
