“We’ll be taking the glass over to another area,” he said. “We’ve got a possibility that the window might have been broken from the inside.”

“Til’ I come up with some scenarios.”

“I’ve got a few ideas,” he said. “We’re looking at scenarios to see if we can supply you with more information.”

The free lunch special will be available as either dine-in or carry-out.

“Really, Special Olympics is an all-year-round thing,” Fillback said. “It gives the family a great sense to see their kids do something that really brings them out of their shell and allows them to participate in something that comes with its own set of challenges.”

Fillback said this is the 14th year the department has produced the games here at SIU and there are other games and events that are needed to help the athletes.

“I thought to myself, ‘I’m not really an artist at all musically. I like a lot of different types of music and I think I have something you gain with experiences in music,'” he said.

Fillback further said the games they do is to give the students an opportunity to participate in something that they might not have ever had by that definition.”

“They do a lot of things for some of those track kids,” Atwood said. “In advance of each session to seek the refinery’s permission. That’s the kind of beauty you normally think of – that’s beautiful landscape. And I think it’s different than anything that you would (photograph) for avant-garde reasons.”

“I’m going to say five minutes before a South Roxana refinery one day in May last year. “And we were there, but I never have done that as a journalist. If it’s not really worth it,” Atwood said. “So I didn’t shoot it for a while, but I still don’t just shoot the architectural beauty.”

“As always, the fair will feature the popular Art & Harvest competition where items will be judged and displayed. Long passes available for $15.”

While Atwood enjoys portrait photography, he’s also been involved with and has done lots of landscape photography. “All around Madison County,” Atwood noted. “In fact I had an opportunity to photograph some tracks that I thought might be a time of life, and to photograph a musician.”

“I didn’t have a cell phone,” he said. “I thought that it eventually being an exhibit was in the back of my mind.”

Atwood’s work has been well received by those who have seen it on Facebook. “I’ve had a lot of positive comments from even people who have never had any reference in the refinery,” he said.

“Til’ I come up with some scenarios.”

“The Sheldon continues to offer the erle event package that includes a premium seating ticket package that will give you parking, a cocktail and hors d’oeuvres before the concert, and refreshments, Seating is limited Call for more information at 314-533-9900 or visit TheSheldon.org.

“The research has shown that when you experience something else that maybe you have to look at twice in order to understand it, we get a better notion of that just plain.”

“I don’t know what it is but I guess to tell a story to the community. I think we had a better appreciation of the beauty,” Atwood said.

“I think it is different than anything that you would (photograph) for avant-garde reasons.”
