2015

Transfers a game changer in higher education

Aldemaro Romero Jr.
CUNY Bernard M Baruch College

How does access to this work benefit you? Let us know!
Follow this and additional works at: https://academicworks.cuny.edu/bb_pubs
Part of the Higher Education Commons

Recommended Citation
https://academicworks.cuny.edu/bb_pubs/897

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Baruch College at CUNY Academic Works. It has been accepted for inclusion in Publications and Research by an authorized administrator of CUNY Academic Works. For more information, please contact AcademicWorks@cuny.edu.
Transfers a game changer in higher education

In time past the vast majority of college students stayed in the school they initially entered. However, that trend has changed as the number of students who transfer from one college to another has grown over the last two decades. According to a study cited in Transfer and Mobility: An Agenda for Public Policy, the number of students who transfer from one college to another has grown significantly. In 1995, about 1.1 million students entered college as transfer students. By 2009, the number of transfer students had grown to about 1.6 million. This growth is due in large part to the increasing pace of college completions. Increasing the pace of college completions is one of the most important challenges facing higher education policymakers. Transfers are also important because they can help students to save money and to avoid credentialing problems. When students change institutions, they often have to re-apply for financial aid and they may have to take courses that they have already completed.

Helping hands

The EHS Dance Team helped Wanda Lucas hang up and organize dresses and suits at the Cinderella Affair, which make come means for teen boys in need to be coming for prom and giving by providing them with a need in dress or suit. The Cinderella Affair run by Julie Gerike and Wanda Lucas in Bunker Hill, pamper teens on the day of their special event with not only clothing and accessories to wear, but also with volunteers doing hair and licensed cosmetologists doing makeup all while enjoying a variety of local food.

ILLINOIS

DECatur (IL) — A 17-year-old from the western part of the state was arrested for allegedly threatening to shoot up a school.

The suspect, identified as John Doe, allegedly told classmates that he was going to bring a gun to school and open fire.

The school district immediately notified authorities, who arrested the suspect.

The suspect is being held at the school's police station and will appear in court at a later date.

Addressing the issue of student suicide, the school district has put in place a number of measures to prevent such incidents from occurring in the future.

The school district has also reached out to community organizations to provide resources and support for students who may be struggling with their mental health.

In addition, the school district has implemented a number of mental health policies to ensure that students are being provided with the necessary support to prevent suicide.

Village

Collidge spoke to the police chief and fire chief who agreed that they would have proper access if a situation arises. "Now it's up to us. We can solve this in our neighborhood," he said.

One of the resources the police department has is social media. The police department has a Facebook page where they can post updates and information about community events.

"We want to make sure that people know what's going on in our neighborhood," Collidge said.

In the report, the school district has emphasized the importance of working collaboratively with community organizations to prevent student suicide.

The school district has also reached out to community organizations to provide resources and support for students who may be struggling with their mental health.

In addition, the school district has implemented a number of mental health policies to ensure that students are being provided with the necessary support to prevent suicide.

"We want to make sure that people know what's going on in our neighborhood," Collidge said.

In the report, the school district has emphasized the importance of working collaboratively with community organizations to prevent student suicide.

The school district has also reached out to community organizations to provide resources and support for students who may be struggling with their mental health.

In addition, the school district has implemented a number of mental health policies to ensure that students are being provided with the necessary support to prevent suicide.