Colleges should be preparing their own leaders

The strongest argument one can make regarding a complicated issue is to integrate both of its facets and some specific examples that validate the point you are trying to prove.

In the last few years we have seen the transformation of an artist who was once a prodigy into a master musician. This was a person exemplifying the best of higher education and a model for tomorrow's teacher. These credentials allowed him or her to pursue an academic career and to become the best

The Sheldon to present Billy Childs

The Sheldon announces its spring schedule of an array of concerts, residencies, and master classes, highlighting local and national artists with great promise.

One of the principal features is the appointment of Alphonse Braas as the Sheldon's new artistic director, a term that already points to a fresh direction for the future.

Bland’s mother expresses outrage

Carols Tucker, mother of Billy Childs, warmed up the charge, which carried a maximum of one year in jail and a $1,000 fine. Tucker said Bland did not have a weapon with her when she was arrested.

Bland, a 26-year-old formerly homeless, was stopped in July for an improper lane change. The stop quickly escalated into a shouting match and a physical altercation in which the trooper said Bland was restrained to a seat. After the altercation, the Texas Department of Public Safety said it would “begin an internal investigation” against Encinia, who has been on paid desk duty since then.

The village has a contract with Good Energy, L.P., a company that sells bulk energy to municipalities throughout the United States. In 2007, Idare was passed making it possible for municipalities to purchase power for electricity for the village.

College said when the rates are announced from bulk providers, the village will ask the residents of the village to discuss whether they think the rate they are getting is a good one.

“Citizens are not bound and can opt out of this program if they choose,” College said. “We have a lot of data that we can use to show the best rate for the residents and small commercial businesses in the village.

“We’ve had a really positive response in the last three weeks, especially after we passed the naming commitment for Planner Family Park. That park has received a lot of attention because of the sports opportunities that will be coming to that area,” Patton said.

There are two more contributions that we’re excited about,” Tomball said.
