Holocaust-Denial Literature: A Fifth Bibliography

John A. Drobnicki

This bibliography is a supplement to four earlier ones published in the March 1994, December 1996, September 1998, and December 2000 issues of the Bulletin of Bibliography. During the intervening time, Holocaust revisionism has continued to be discussed both in the scholarly literature and in the mainstream press, especially due to the libel lawsuit filed by David-Irving against Deborah Lipstadt and Penguin Books and his subsequent appeal of that verdict. The Holocaust deniers, who prefer to call themselves "revisionists" in an attempt to gain scholarly legitimacy, have refused to go away and remain as vocal as ever—Bradley R. Smith has continued to send revisionist advertisements to college newspapers, generating publicity for his cause.

Holocaust denial, which will be used interchangeably with Holocaust revisionism in this bibliography, is a body of literature that seeks to "prove" that the Jewish Holocaust did not happen. Although individual revisionists may have different motives and beliefs, they all share at least one point: that there was no systematic attempt by Nazi Germany to exterminate European Jewry. Hence they claim that the Holocaust is a "hoax" perpetrated by Jews ("Zionists") in an attempt to blackmail the rest of the world for sympathy, money, and legitimacy for the State of Israel.

This bibliography includes both works about Holocaust revisionism and works of Holocaust revisionism. Although Holocaust deniers write in many languages, the scope of this project (as with the four previous articles) has been limited to works in English. Because of space constraints, URLs are provided for only some of the materials that are available online—most newspapers (including college publications) now have websites that make the full text of their articles available for various periods of time. Many of the articles dealing with David Irving and/or his lawsuits are also available on his website <http://www.fpp.co.uk/>. Readers should bear in mind that, because of its unstable nature, Internet addresses often change: URLs were accurate and operative at the time this project was submitted for publication.

While this bibliography has been divided into many subject areas, it is acknowledged that many of the entries cross several categories, especially the works in the "General Overview" section. Materials regarding David Irving's lawsuit against Deborah Lipstadt and Penguin Books are included under "European and Russian/Soviet Revisionists," since Irving is a British national and the trial (and leave-to-appeal hearing) took place in London.
