For the names of the students admitted in June (except such as failed to report on September 13th), the Faculty respectfully refer you to the Thirty-seventh Annual Register of the College.

The Faculty would again call the attention of the Board to the pressing necessity for more room for the accommodation of the classes. This was fully set forth on pages 7 and 8 of the Annual Report of the Faculty for the year 1886. The necessity then brought to your notice is at the present time still more pressing. The number of students has largely increased, and the apprehension that a part of the Library-rooms would be required for class-room instruction has been realized. For an entire year the Library has been so used.

In accordance with the resolution of the Executive Committee establishing a course of instruction in Pedagogies, lectures have been given during the year to the Senior Class, as follows: In the first term by the Professor of Philosophy, on the Theory of Teaching; in the second term by the Professor of the English Language and Literature, on Principles and Methods of Teaching.

With this exception the course remains as heretofore, and there are no new features in the work of the College requiring special mention in this report. The character of the work done in the several departments, as well as the general tone of the College has never been better than during the year past. The successful prosecution of academic studies affords little occasion for special comment. Yet it should be remembered that the maintenance among so large a body of students, of those habits of severe and patient application which our standards demand, is a matter of the very greatest importance. This is only accomplished through unremitting effort on the part of those charged with the government and instruction of the College.

The excellent discipline that has prevailed throughout all the classes during the past year is largely due to the feeling on the part of the students that the regulations of the College represent the delegated authority of the State, which here as elsewhere requires obedience in the interests of all.
In concluding this report, the Faculty desire to express their sincere appreciation of the care and attention given to the interests of the College by the Board of Trustees during the year just ended.

A. S. WEBB, LL.D.,
President.

ADOLPH WERNER, Ph.D.,
Secretary.
