It will be seen that the attendance during the last year (1894–95) was very large. The merit roll shows that the standard of scholarship has been well maintained and has not been lowered owing to the increase of numbers; while the reports on conduct indicate that the students have manifested both self-respect and respect for the constituted authorities.

The number of students on the rolls at the beginning of the present year is very much larger than last year. Notably the Senior Class is the largest ever in the College, numbering one-third more than any preceding one. While other causes more or less remote may be found for this increase in numbers, the immediate and principal cause, we think, is the efficient educational work which this College has been doing and the appreciation of that work by the people of this city.

Owing to the continued increase in the number of students we are obliged to repeat with greater emphasis our annual statement of crowded classes and inadequate accommodations; and we feel it our duty to express to your honorable body the urgent necessity of providing as soon as possible a larger building constructed with more rational regard for the uses for which it is intended.

In our last annual report we asked your honorable body to procure suitable legislation to give this College a proper habitation, and your efforts have been instrumental in securing means sufficient to purchase a new site and provide for the erection of a new building.

During the last year your Executive Committee requested us to give them and received from us our opinion as to a proper site. The site eventually selected by the Executive Committee meets with our hearty approval. Its elevated and healthful situation, its freedom from disturbing sounds and sights, and its extent ample in all probability for the needs of the city when its present limits are filled, cannot be surpassed, if equaled anywhere within those limits. Its accessibility even at present is far greater than was that of our present site when the building was first erected. At that time there was only one line of horse cars in the city.

In view of the immediate needs of the College we urge your honorable body to take steps to procure suitable plans for the new edifice, so that there may be little delay in building, when the land shall have been acquired. It is our earnest wish that the new edifice shall be constructed with regard for both general and special uses. Some suggestions may be offered on account of their primary importance. We advise that recitation and lecture rooms, where oral instruction is given, should be located where they may be as free as possible from disturbing sounds; secondly, that all drawing rooms, and most if not all rooms used for chemical or physical work should, as far as possible, have a north light; again, that the workshop should be so placed that the noises engendered therein could be least audible in recitation and lecture rooms; further, that the means of access to class rooms and of communication between parts of the edifice should be constructed with a view to economy of the student's time; finally, that proper ventilation should always be kept in view.

The Faculty desires to be of every possible service to your honorable body by advice in the details of the plans for the new building or in such other directions with reference to it as you may indicate.
With regard to the instruction in the College, while its general efficiency has not been impaired, two important changes in methods have been made in two departments, which are expected to improve them. The course in French, on the suggestion of the Professor, as approved by the Faculty and your Executive Committee, has been broadened so as to offer a comprehensive view of the entire French literature and the changes in the language from its earliest to its present form. In English, by a like procedure, the course has been made to include the study of American literature, and to give more attention to the student’s power of expression.

Our College has recently suffered a great loss by the death of George Benton Newcomb, Ph.D., Professor of Philosophy, October 15, 1895. His death in the prime of his usefulness and mental vigor was the result in part of excessive devotion to his College work. The Faculty and other instructors and the students of the Senior and Junior Classes adopted appropriate resolutions expressing regret at his untimely death and appreciation of his character and services. Copies of these resolutions have been forwarded to your honorable body.

In concluding this brief report of what we believe has been a very successful year in the history of the College, it gives us pleasure to extend to you our heartfelt thanks, in which every well-wisher of the College will join, for the great and permanent benefits you have secured for it, your solicitude for its welfare and your ability in its care and government.

The College of the City of New York,
November 26, 1895.

Alex. S. Webb, LL.D.,
President.

Adolph Werner,
Secretary.

Ordered, That said report be printed in full in the minutes.
