Movies to Show Students on Farms

Parents of Brooklyn College students who worked as farm cadets in Morrisville, N. Y., last Summer will be guests of the college today at an informal program in Boylan Hall. Motion pictures of the students who engaged in harvesting peas and beans will be shown and there will be talks by Harry D. Gideonse, president, and Prof. Ralph C. Benedict, who directed the farm project.

In a preliminary report submitted to President Gideonse this week by Professor Benedict some of the achievements of the project were noted. These included insights obtained into farm life, improved health of students, stressing of the value of the project as a food conservation program and the possible setting of a pattern which the State may adopt as a program.
