Last summer Farm Labor Project at Morrisville can be considered a first, experimental model. As a first try, we can be proud of it without claiming that it was perfect. It worked. It is highly rated by those who observed, both for its food production, and as an educational program. Village, County, and State agencies are united in asking us to do it again in 1944.

There are the same reasons this year why we should be interested to carry on from a patriotic standpoint. "Wickard predicts scarcer food in '44" is headlined. Farm Manpower Director Hurd wires from Albany: "Please convey to the prospective recruits critical need of workers. Local help is shortest on record and production goals are 10% above last year. Only with enlistment of every available worker for service on food front can New York make maximum contribution to food production for fighting men and women and for our allies and civilians." W. J. Weaver, state Supervisor of Victory Corps, writes: "I should like to see the number in your group increased to the total limit possible with the accommodations at Morrisville, to 200 workers."

It needs only one hand to sketch the outlines of a new model, of a new building. It takes many hands working together to translate the first sketch into the detailed lines and figures of the blueprints from which the finished product can be constructed. Below are sketched the general lines for a 1944 Brooklyn College Bridge to Morrisville, the third Farm Labor Project which the College has sponsored. Students and Faculty are invited to join in the work of drafting the blueprints for this year's model. According to a good time schedule, these blueprints should be completed by April 1st so that the new model may then be put on public display and general production started in the form of recruiting. Work for the next two months will be divided among the following problems for each of which working committees will be needed:

1. Steering Committee.
2. Information and publicity.
3. Curriculum.
4. Assembly-Forums.
5. Field work and production.
6. Dormitory organization.
7. Cafeteria.
8. Campus activities and recreation.
9. Farm Biology (Victory garden; poultry raising).
11. Recruiting and enlistment.
12. Selective service.

Other fields of planning will be added as needed. Some of the above may require division into two or more. Headquarters for information will be located in Room 2107 Ingersoll, R. C. Benedict, and Room 1154 Boylan, Miss Santa. Notices will be posted on the bulletin boards opposite each room. Those interested to volunteer are invited to hand in their names at either office.
