T. Flynn proposes faculty control

In an effort to limit the autocratic powers of the presidents of the four city colleges, and extend life tenure to members of the faculties, a special committee of five, headed by Dr. A. J. Harris, of the Education, was formed to discuss changes in the administrative policies of the colleges at the next meeting of the Board of Higher Education.

The program would give the power of promotion and appointment now held by the presidents of Hunter, Brooklyn, Queens, and City Colleges to the Board of Higher Education. Other duties of the Presidents would be shifted to faculty councils in each college.

Each council would be composed of the presidents of the college, the deans, the rector, the chairman of the college department, and six members appointed by the presidents of the college department and other members appointed by the presidents of the college department.

It is considered highly probable that the Board will accept recommendations of the various committees at its next meeting.
