FIRST GRADUATE DEGREES TO BE AWARDED AT BROOKLYN COLLEGE

Four masters' degrees, the first to be granted at Brooklyn College, will be conferred upon three men and one woman student of the Graduate Division of Brooklyn College at the eighth semi-annual commencement exercises of the College at the Brooklyn Academy of Music Thursday evening, June 19, Dr. William A. Boylan, president, announced yesterday.

Rose Trapani and Milton Novak, who did their graduate work in the English Department of the Division submitted theses on "The New Humanist Controversy from 1908-1932" and "The Influence of Joseph Addison on the Early Writings of Benjamin Franklin," respectively. Bernard Greenspan, who specialized in the field of mathematics, prepared a thesis on "A Study of Finite Geometries." "A Harmonic Configuration on n-Space, n = 1, 2, 3...." was the subject of the thesis by Sidney Kaplan, the fourth graduate.

Organized in February, 1935, the Graduate Division has enlarged its original curriculum of 20 courses until it now offers 130 courses in the fields of Economics, Education, English, German, Government, History, Mathematics, and Speech. Professor Joseph C. Cohen is director of the Division.
