The proposed budget will most likely be approved by Congress. It has been criticized by many independent analysts who have stated that this plan will reduce national security, health care, social services, and national scientific research, and the country’s capabilities to respond to extreme weather and national security threats.

Budgets can be viewed as political statements. The Trump administration has secured a foothold in the proposed federal budget.

Budgets that foster foreign-language study, while reducing funding for social services, will also be the subject of debate.

It is not just to cut taxes to the rich and eliminating regulations stimulates the economy. The budget will not go unnoticed.

I think it brings more attention when police officers by first name, which is what our goal is.
