Some time ago a salmon colored card was shoved at us and we signed. We joined up with Milli Sci because we thought it might be fun, it was an easy course and because we would not have to take Hygiene 5 and 6. But mostly because we did not give a damn!

But now we give a couple of damns! Hygiene is out now and Milli Sci drill might be fun for Boy Scouts and kids who don't know any better, but not for fellows who have alleged minds.

We suppose this always happens - that fellows get sick of the of the course after awhile or begin to feel that ROTC has no place in our college. And that is why the Dep't. got the ruling across that you can't drop Milli Sci without loss of credit. If they could get away with it we guess they would lock us up as they do with the regulars and the National Guard. we said in a recent issue, "once the department gets its hands on you they won't let go."

We still got the naive idea that a fellow ought to have the right to take a course and drop it when he wants to without losing credit for terms completed, especially in a so-called optional course. Even those of us who still want to remain in the corps feel that anyone who wants to drop it should be allowed to do so without loss of credit for terms completed. Most cadets will agree to that.

Well then let's get the rule changed. The Student Council has already unanimously endorsed this principle. The Cadet Club, as the only cadet organization on the campus, should do likewise. There are petitions being spread among the cadets requesting the Committee on Curriculum to allow for partial credits, let's all sign these petitions and show that we cadets are in favor of this measure.
