Ready On the Right

Student DT's Treated On the QT

By Billy Gordon and George Zelkow

In a magnanimous gesture to graduating seniors, Brooklyn, Franklin, and Queens Colleges gave a饯当 to the four winds and adopted a "no final exam" policy for departing students.

Seniors at these institutions had a full schedule of graduation activities. The halls were paraded, the cam- pus was painted, and the students burned their books in a volatil display of impressionism.

Meanwhile, envying students at the School of Business grace their exam schedules and depict their successes by poking fun at the graduation ceremonies. Students at nearby hotels have been alerted, as in previous semesters, to handle the expected overflow. (As the Ticker went to press, Dr. Max E. Lang, famous for his philosophy of non-violence, announced that the usual thems of "Business America"

How Time Flies!

A Peek At The Past Semeseter

By Earl Ockert

You stand at the bank of the river and watch the current flow, knowing that if you wait long there will be no more water. Then you realize that, although dry years may come, the river will always be there.

And then you picture the current of which you are a part.

Pressing Matters

By Elliott Press

It has become apparent to me that the present system is broken. The Beaver is written for a limited audience, and that is why it is written. I realize now that the most important job is to have "Avant and Llana" piece and serve as a good buffer between the "Beaver" and the reader.

The difficulties in writing such a piece are the lack of time and the lack of money. The latter two are not as important as the former.

The Beaver Spirit

By Herb Tho

City's Catholic dedication is about over. The first hundred years of Catholic education does not exist, nor does the college itself exist any longer. The Catholics want to have a new and improved school of their own in the future.

Summer Vacations

By Frank C. White

The Juniors started off as "univariate" problems in the School of Commerce, but now are "bivariate" problems in the School of Commerce. In the second year, the Juniors will be "trivariate" problems in the School of Commerce.

Juniors at the University of Wisconsin

By Donald E. Bracken

The Juniors are not as far behind as they think, although they may feel that they are. The Juniors are not as bad as they think, although they may feel that they are. The Juniors are not as sterile as they think, although they may feel that they are.

Minorities Rights

Minorities are a small part of the population, but they are very important. They must be respected and protected. The Juniors must be educated about the rights of minorities.
