Change in ROTC Seen in Offing

By Gerry Reise

An improvised ROTC program, emanating from the Department of the Army and affected at fifty-seven colleges throughout the land, is being studied and evaluated within the City College officers' training course if found.

The innovation, calling for an overall infantry officer classroom training for all ROTC planning and special operations being operated on a voluntary basis under the title, "The Branch General" program.

Summer training procedures will be revised to the extent of allowing advanced students to complete specialized army camp for the usual six week training period. The number of students undergoing specialized training will be determined on a quota basis in direct relation to the specialized needs of the army.

Upon return to college, these students will be grouped together in class to receive the general training course.

The present program at the College is divided into two army branches, infantry and engineering, as stated above, will be influenced when the proposed plan is initiated.

Colonel Malcolm W. Kammerer, recently appointed to the Army War College, asserted that he would be in favor of instituting the new program immediately. Colonel Kammerer said that under such an innovation his instructional staff would be engaged in a project to receive instructors from all army branches. These specialists will lend their talents to completing the general training of all potential second lieutenants.

Further alteration of current ROTC training may be forthcoming in the next year due to a Ford Foundation report which has been studied by Mrs. Anna Rosenburg, assistant secretary of defense.

The report calls for the inauguration of three or more "pilot programs" devoted to "more effective training to develop a sense of responsibility and capability for leadership in the nation's 506 ROTC branches."

Famed Judge To Give Talk

Dear Editor:

Weekly, members of the city Band gather at the Bell Tavern, 329 Fourth Ave., next door to the College and next-door to the College of New York, where they meet to plan the next week's program. This week, they have arranged a celebration for the opening of the new student center. The Band will play several popular songs and will be joined by the College Singers, making it a night to remember.

Sincerely,

Bootees Tie Queens; Face Rutgers Today

By Larry Pollock

Playing against an underrated Queen's College eleven in a game that figured to be little more than a tune-up for today's big battle at the home of the Scarlet Claws, the Beaver Gunners scored twice in the first half but then had to settle for a 2-2 tie as the night's hawks rowed back with two quick goals before a sparse crowd at Queens College, Saturday.

The tie gave the Beaver Boot­ers a Met Conference record of three wins, no losses and one tie, leaving them a point behind the six-time champions, the Scarlet Claws, who have now posted four straight intra-city victories.

Today's game started out with a bang as the future of Lewiston Stadium at 3, and the large crowd of the sea­son is expected to be on hand to view the renewal of this annual soccer struggle.

The last two games between the two resulted in upsets; the Beaver Gunners triumphed by 1-0 last season, and the Scarlet Claws came back to ruin an otherwise perfect season for the Lavender team last year.

After a scoreless first quarter with the two teams on even keel, it was out to the left of goalie Ken Gerstein.

Almost 15 minutes later, at 15:42 of the second period, the Beavers scored, and the Scarlet Claws came back to ruin an otherwise perfect season for the Lavender team last year.

The beams of the Stevky Sargi­pati, captain of the team, and goal­keeper Ken Gerstein, bounced the ball into the goal just as the Scarlet Claws had scored.

The line-up, which included Ken Sargi­pati, captain of the team, and goal­keeper Ken Gerstein, showed that the ball had been hit, and the Scarlet Claws had scored.

The linesmen, who were out for three wins, no losses and one tie, leaving the Scarlet Claws a point behind the six-time champions, the Scarlet Claws, who have now posted four straight intra-city victories.
