Jazz Concert Approved at Initial Council Meet

Student-Council held its initial meeting of the semester Friday evening in an atmosphere that was high of controversy. However, during the discussions of the pro-ed Jazz Concert, a ruling by SC President Bob Greger, Director of Lamport House, was tabled to the Board. The Board considers the Concert Group to its agenda for next month.

Personnel behind the event, which appears on this page, are: Director of Lamport House, Greger; SC President Bob Greger; SC Secretary Bob Bello; and SC Treasurer Bob Bello.

A two-hour meeting between students, alumni, faculty and department officials, to discuss how House Plan's facilities can be used by each department, was held Thursday in the Lamport House picture. It was also tried to ferret out opinion on a proposed Board of Governors.

The Board of Governors' concept has arisen during previous meetings held by HP director Irving Greger, SC President Bob Cord, SC President Gene Tashoff, and HP President Eugene Taupin. The quartet, said that "a Board of Governors, immediately reponsible to ICB and consisting of all organizations belonging to Lamport House (the possible entity; not the House Plan group) in a proportioning voting set-up is the temporary plan of the moment."

Board of Estimate Discards Baruch-Police Academy Bid

The Board of Estimate Thursday doomed plans to construct a new Police academy adjoining the Baruch School. This action, in effect, removes any hope of improvement of Baruch School facilities in the near future.

In approving the proposed affiliation, the Board approved a plan submitted by Budget Director Abraham D. Beame for construction of the Academy of city-owned land on the northeast corner of Twenty-first Street, east of Third Avenue.

Beame stated that he felt the Baruch-Academy combination was an "unnecessary" one.

The Board, or any governing body, would issue dates and publicity rights to organizations using Lamport House facilities. But this "plan of the moment" came under fire when Lou Marin, member of both House and Student Council, suggested an alternative.

His setup would give ICB the power to regulate Lamport facilities only for those days allocated to House Council—House Plan's governing body. A similar plan was submitted by George Grant, Grant's proposal would allow any club that used HP's facilities "in a steady basis to join House Council and take off.

The Battle for the New School\n
The situation at Lamport House is one of constant struggle between the "haves," Lamport House, and the "have-nots," Academy Hall. The "haves," Lamport House, are trying to expand their facilities and resources to maintain their advantages over the "have-nots." The "have-nots," Academy Hall, are attempting to improve their own conditions. This struggle is one of the main conflicts on campus and has been a source of tension for many years.

The Battle for the New School

Students are particularly hard for former dean Thomas Norton, who worked diligently for the Police Academy-Baruch House, a building which holds a maximum capacity of 15,000 students and is the envy of many. It has been a difficult pill to swallow for many students who have only known the small, overcrowded facilities of the old school.

The Battle for the New School

As New York City moves into the future, the need for modern facilities for students becomes more apparent. The Police Academy-Baruch House is currently outdated and does not meet the needs of today's students. The Board of Governors is considering options for a new building to replace the old one. The students are demanding that the new building be state-of-the-art and meet all modern standards.

The Battle for the New School

However, the Board of Governors is hesitant to commit to a new building due to the considerable cost. Many students are pushing for the Board to reconsider their decision and build the new school. The students believe that it is a necessary investment in the future of the school.

The Battle for the New School

The Board of Governors is considering options such as expanding the existing building or finding a new location for the school. The students are demanding that the new building be state-of-the-art and meet all modern standards. The Battle for the New School is ongoing, and the future of the school remains uncertain.

An instructor in the Hygiene Department since 1936, Dr. Harry J. deGirolamo was named track and field coach at the City College at the last week, succeeding Dr. Harold Anson Bruce, who retired. Dr. deGirolamo has had some experience supervising track squads as he has been the Evening Session track mentor since 1944. At New York U., from which he received his Master's and Doctorate degrees, the new addition to the coaching family, fairly enough, concentrated on major sports other than track, namely baseball and football.

The new coach feels that: "Following in the footsteps of Dr. Bruce, a great man, will be a tremendous task. He did an outstanding job and if I do half as well, I will have accomplished a lot."

Intra-Mural Board Basketball Tournament To Open Next Week With 32 Teams Vieing

When Columbia would be at home on an Indian Summer's day and the crowd and the warm air would fill Baker Field, the white Henry Hapgood Bridge gleamed in the background and a student dressed up as a crazy-looking lion crouching out on the field. When Waterfield and Rama would come to the Polo Grounds and Ken Strong would battle them with his big toe. Yes, when you could get into the Stadium breathing with your high school G0 card and drink coffee and watch Buddy Young and Spike Sanders hurl themselves at the Browns. When the Browns would turn the lights on in the fourth quarter and when, after it was all over, you would leave with the thousands, your fingers too numb to hold your program.
