Garber Out; City Forfeits Upsala Game

By Lou Pohoryles

Three minutes in which they could do no right and Fordham could do no wrong couldn't avert the loss when the two quintets met last night in the excursion gym. The game ended with the Beavers at the short end of a 63-60 score.

No only did the Beavers lose the contest against Fordham but they also found out that they lost the contest which they had won against Upsala Monday. Richie Garber, who had sparked the Lavender to a record-breaking 79-84 win over the Jesuites, has been ruled academically ineligible for the Spring term.

The dry spell hit the Beavers at the seven minute mark of the second half with City leading 41-38. The Rams' talented trio of sophomores—Jim Cunningham, Ernie Haynes and Bill McCollady combined with Ed Friedman in a nine point burst that cost City the lead—and the game.

The Beavers then straightened out themselves out with Joe Bernardi and Ralph Schefflin scoring fifteen of the last nine minutes of City points. Only Ron Kehn's three point play and strong rebounding and sharp shooting prevented them from tying the game.

The Beavers played the Rams (Continued On Page 4)

Rams Edge Beavers, 63-60

City College President Buell G. Gallagher last night discussed "discrimination at places like the University of Alabama" and took to task the trustees of that institution for allowing the "intrusion of mob violence from outside the University determine the pressures which guide responsible academic authorities."

City College President Buell G. Gallagher last night discussed "discrimination at places like the University of Alabama" and took to task the trustees of that institution for allowing the "intrusion of mob violence from outside the University determine the pressures which guide responsible academic authorities."

Speaking at the commencement exercises of the Mount Sinai School of Nursing, Dr. Gallagher expressed "disgust" at "the manner in which demagogues like Senator Eastland fan the popular anxieties of the moment to warp their own political pet."

The President said, "We don't think society desperately needs right now is fresh infusion of white corpuscles in the civic blood stream. The poisons of racial prejudice and religious bigotry are liberally fed into our common life by the ignorant, the unformed and the small-minded, not is men those with vested interests."

"Disgusting instances of racial discrimination," Dr. Gallagher noted that while the press emphasized negative incidents in the racial and religious field, it is not giving enough coverage to the progress being made. He cited the former State College for Negroes in West Virginia, where 708 Negroes and 100 white students were attending classes together within four months after the Supreme Court decision barring segregation.

Truman vs. Baruch; Disagreement Rages

In the course of writing his memoirs, reprinted in Life magazine, former President Harry S. Truman sharply rebuked Bernard M. Baruch. He stated that Baruch "assumed an unofficial status as 'adviser' and was concerned with whether he would receive public recognition... ." (Truman) had no intention of having him tell me what his job should be." In the February 13 issue of Life, Baruch replied: "It appears that Truman was a better president than he is an historian. When the full story of the drafting of our atomic energy proposals is made public, including all and not part of the facts in Mr. Truman's possession, history will show no basis for this display of personal spite.

"Mr. Truman may have been anxious, as he indicates in this article, to enlil my aid in a difficult political situation. But my only duty both to the President and the American people was to advocate the safest and soundest proposals for the control of atomic energy that could be devised. That was my sole consideration unless, in my 76th year, I represented to the United States on the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission.

"The question as to what was to be done was a policy once when Mr. Truman and I discussed my assignment. Far from reading a lecture on the responsibilities of the presidency, as your Life excerpts suggested, Mr. Truman made this exact and perhaps characteristic reply, 'Hell, you are!'"

"I understood this remark as an expression of his reliance upon, not part of the facts in Mr. Truman's possession, history will show no basis for this display of personal spite..."
The Monthly Radio Show that George appears on is sponsored to Europe. Hitler's army would move in. George arrived in America. The change of life of a storybook hero. of getting his own TV show on Naze Escapee Here: Nazi Vex Future Grads
COMING THROUGH: Stanley Friedman, (8), Beaver playmaker, attempts driving lay-up in first half of last night's City Fordham contest. (Continued from Page 1)

The hero of the contest, however, was Richie Garber, City's smallest man at 5'6. He entered the game with the score tied at 71-70 in City's favor at the twelve-minute mark of the second half. Garber proceeded to spark the Lavender by toasting in twelve tallies.

The hero of the contest, however, was Richie Garber, City's smallest man at 5'6. He entered the game with the score tied at 71-70 in City's favor at the twelve-minute mark of the second half. Garber proceeded to spark the Lavender by toasting in twelve tallies.

The hero of the contest, however, was Richie Garber, City's smallest man at 5'6. He entered the game with the score tied at 71-70 in City's favor at the twelve-minute mark of the second half. Garber proceeded to spark the Lavender by toasting in twelve tallies.

The hero of the contest, however, was Richie Garber, City's smallest man at 5'6. He entered the game with the score tied at 71-70 in City's favor at the twelve-minute mark of the second half. Garber proceeded to spark the Lavender by toasting in twelve tallies.

The hero of the contest, however, was Richie Garber, City's smallest man at 5'6. He entered the game with the score tied at 71-70 in City's favor at the twelve-minute mark of the second half. Garber proceeded to spark the Lavender by toasting in twelve tallies.

The hero of the contest, however, was Richie Garber, City's smallest man at 5'6. He entered the game with the score tied at 71-70 in City's favor at the twelve-minute mark of the second half. Garber proceeded to spark the Lavender by toasting in twelve tallies.