Delay Move To Approve Chancellor

The New York City Board of Estimate has deferred until May 9 its decision to establish the post of chancellor of the five city colleges in accordance with a request by the Citizens' Union for further time to study the plan.

City College President Buel G. Gallagher officially endorsed the plan Thursday. "There is a need," he said "for a permanent official to handle the overall administrative duties of the five colleges."

Seymour B. Weissman, executive secretary of the College Alumni Association, has appealed for a clear definition of the duties of the chancellor. The Alumni Association is opposed to the plan as presently constituted because "it does not provide adequate safeguards of the autonomy of the individual colleges, presidents or protect the integrity and distinct character of each of the municipal colleges."

Weissman has stated that it "is regrettable that a chancellor would become the governing officer of the administrative coordination and assistance... instead of merely providing the administrative coordination and assistance."

Baruch School’s Founding To Be Discussed by Fertig

The events leading up to the chartering of the Baruch School will be discussed by Malcolm Ferrig at the Charter Day Convocation May 9.

This year’s celebration, taking place in Pauline Edwards Theater, will mark the hundredth anniversary of the founding of the Baruch School and the 110th anniversary of the City College.

It was Ferrig who, in 1916, introduced a bill in the State Assembly enabling the College to expand its liberal arts curricula to one including business, technology and education.

Fertig, a member of the Class of 1907, will deliver the greetings of the fifty-year class at the Homecoming, May 4.

During his political career in Albany, Ferrig introduced many bills designed to help the City College enlarge its facilities.

Classes will be suspended from 10:30 to 11:40 so that as many students as possible will be able to attend the ceremonies.

Fertig, a former adviser to Governors Franklin D. Roosevelt and Herbert Lehman, is presently a member of the Board of Directors of the Young Men’s Hebrew Association and the Urban League, He is presently a member of the executive counsel of New York City.

Other bills introduced by Ferrig included one which provided for the first evening and extension courses at the School of Business. He also backed a bill providing for equal salaries for male and female teachers and for the extension of the minimum wage law.

Last Charter Day, John A. Tubbok, former president of New York City, discussed business problems in New York City.

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor of THE TICKER:

As a member of the Class of 1947, I always find intriguing the stories and memories of my classmates. In this issue, I was interested to read about the experiences of Abe Kafka in Latvia.

Abe Kafka, who was a student at CCNY during the 1930s, was born in Latvia. In 1939, at the age of six, Abe and his family fled Latvia to escape the Nazi invasion. They eventually settled in the United States, where Abe continued his education and later became a successful businessman.

I am particularly interested in how Abe Kafka's experiences as a child in Latvia have shaped his life as an adult. As a member of the Class of 1947, I wonder if there are other stories of classmates who have faced similar challenges and how these experiences have influenced their lives.

I look forward to hearing from other members of the Class of 1947 who have stories to share.

Sincerely,
[Your Name]
