City Action Rejects Bid for School Site

An eleventh hour attempt to convince Mayor Robert F. Wagner that the city should postpone sale of 71 acres of land to Fordham University and set it aside for a new Baruch School ended in failure last week.

In a letter sent to the Mayor, February 23, Hyman Epstein, chairman of the College Division of Local 384 of Board of Higher Education Employees, urged him to halt the scheduled sale of land in the Lincoln Square development so that the Board of Estimate could have further time to consider the Baruch School's needs.

However, the plea was ignored. The city announced Saturday that the land had been auctioned to Fordham as the only bidder.

The city has already three court battles to enable it to sell the land to Fordham at reduced cost, in an effort to avoid the constitutional separation of church and state. They have vowed to take the Supreme Court.

In the letter to the Mayor, Epstein, who was joined by vice-presidents Louis Greenman and Louis Greenman, said that the present facilities at the Baruch School are "fantastically primitive."

They added: "A new building would not be a big expense because the new site is a valuable one and the money received from its sale would be large enough to offset a fair portion of a new building's cost."

The Lincoln Square Redevelopment Project includes the land bounded by Columbus and Amsterdam Avenues from 60-62 Streets.

Miss Greenman, told THE TICKER that the biggest problem at the Baruch School is lack of facilities.

Van Veen Displays Mural

Professor Stuyvesant Van of the Uptown Art Department has completed a mural for New York City Board of Education which will be installed in a new school. The mural, entitled "Children Playing," was recently exhibited at the Architectural League of New York. Van describes it as "symbolic of peace and hope." The mural is 8 feet by 12 feet and is done in 28 colors. The painting was developed from a small sketch. It was then projected onto a large sheet of paper fastened to the wall.

Van Veen then penciled the image onto the large sheet. Each section of the mural was numbered to correspond with a specific color and shape. Sections were set out and numbered, to be used for changing the pieces.

Curriculum Conference Set

By Council for March 28

A Curriculum Conference will be held among the faculty, doctoral students, and faculty council March 28, it was announced by Irwin Feller, Council president, last Friday's meeting. The Conference will be in the form of a Tea from 2-4. This will be followed by the regular Council meeting at 4 at which various department heads will address the Council.

The purpose of this as set forth by Feller, is to orient and guide the Council as to the curriculum problems existing.

Degree Change

Council also passed a motion to have a committee investigate a possible degree change. The motion, proposed by Bruce Markens, stated that Council's committees will "contact graduate schools, new schools and business concerns to find out information concerning the BBA degree."

In 1956, on recommendations by Council, a faculty committee was set up to investigate the effect of the BBA degree on business personnel.

However, the proponents of this motion felt that the 1966 study was incomplete as to area covered and a more intensive study should be undertaken by Council.

Administrative Group Waives Ban on Gates

By Larry Miller

John Gates, former editor of the Daily Worker who recently quit the Communist party, has been allowed to speak at the municipal colleges pending approval of the individual presidents.

The Administrative Council, in an unprecedented waiver of its March 1957 decision which bans persons convicted under the Smith Act from speaking at the City's colleges, made this ruling only for Gates.

The Smith Act makes it a crime to conspire to advocate violent overthrow of the government. Gates served a prison term for violating this act.

With Cal Ramsey and Tom Sanders dominating the backcourt, the Violet Vikings of New York University tripped City College 61-53 in a thrilling, well played game before a wildly cheering crowd of 1,500 at the Fordham University Gym last night.

With Joe Bennardo driving the scorers with 19 points and playing heads-up all the way, City stayed in contention until the closing minutes of the game.

The game was the last for Dave Polansky as coach of the Beavers with the return of Nat Holman next season.

City's final record for the season is 9-8 and Polansky's record for four years as varsity mentor is a loss.

The Beavers jumped into the lead on two quick baskets by Bob Silver and Joel Ascher at the start of the game. With Silver and Hector Lewis dominating, the boards in the early minutes the

Special Elections Fill Student, Class Councils

All Student Council seats but one have been filled as a result of Friday's student elections.

The representatives for the remaining seat will be chosen by a Class Council election tomorrow. All members of the Class are eligible and are invited to vote.

The two members of the lower freshmen class elected in Friday's voting were Robert Cooper and Fred Arasaki.

Eleventh president of the class, who served from February through the spring semester, was elected to the Class of '60, Matt Leverett. He is a senior and was chosen to represent the class for the spring and summer terms.

Edward Keller was reelected to the Class of '61.

In the upper freshmen class, Harry Speller selected the Class of '61, and the Class of '62 was elected to the Class of '62. Keller and Leverett were reelected to the Class of '62.

There were no changes in the Class of '63.

The class of '60, which has the largest number of members, is the most active and is the one that will have the most influence on the college.
Department Split

The TICKER takes pride in the vast number of B.B.S. students, administrators, faculty members, and other interested parties who have expressed their views on the subject of the separation of departments. In the past, the School faculty, with a few exceptions, has been divided into two main departments: the Uptown campus, which consisted of the Magazine and the Advertising departments, and the Downtown campus, which included the Marketing and the Industrial Packaging departments. The split was largely due to a disagreement among the faculty members regarding the future direction of the school.

The students and faculty members of the Uptown campus were concerned that the Downtown campus was not focusing enough on the needs of the students and that the separation of departments was hindering the overall growth of the school. They felt that a more unified approach would be beneficial for the students and the school as a whole.

On the other hand, the faculty members of the Downtown campus believed that the separation of departments was necessary to maintain the quality of education and research. They argued that each department had its own unique strengths and that the separation allowed for a more focused approach in each area.

The split caused a great deal of controversy and tension among the faculty members and students. The students and faculty members of the Uptown campus were particularly concerned about the impact of the split on the students, who would have to travel between the two campuses to attend classes.

Political Activity

An attempt by the Republican Students Club to change the emphasis on campus has been met with strong opposition from the Democratic Students Club. The Republican Club has been advocating for a change in the curriculum, which it believes is too liberal and not focused enough on preparing students for the workforce.

The Democratic Club, on the other hand, believes that the current curriculum provides a well-rounded education that prepares students for a variety of careers. They argue that the Republican Club's proposals would undermine the educational mission of the school.

The situation has become particularly tense in recent weeks, with both clubs organizing rallies and speaking engagements on campus. The administration has tried to mediate the conflict, but so far without much success.

Packaging

The Undergraduate Curriculum Committee has called for a revision of the Industrial Packaging curriculum. The committee's report, which has been widely discussed on campus, suggests that the current curriculum is not meeting the needs of students or industry.

The committee's report recommends that the curriculum be reorganized to include more practical, hands-on experience. They also suggest that the faculty members be more involved in the planning and implementation of the curriculum.

The report has been met with mixed reactions among the students and faculty members. Some have praised the committee's efforts to improve the curriculum, while others have criticized the lack of input from the industry.

The report is currently under review by the administration, and a decision on how to proceed is expected in the near future.

Girls lend cheers to CCNY Athletes

Girls lend cheers to CCNY Athletes. The CCNY Athletics program has been especially successful in the last few years, with the College's basketball team usually doing well at the national level. The CCNY Basketball Association recently sponsored a basketball contest to be staged on its floor.

The inadequacy of the Wingate Gymnasium

The inadequacy of the Wingate Gymnasium is much too small for a basketball contest. The gymnasium is constantly being overused. The problem is not easily solved. The College's need for a new field house is probably only second to the College's need for a new athletic field. The Board of Higher Education is not expecting any positive action from the Board of Trustees.

Baseball Coach Hopeful About Team's Chances

By Mary Levy

With hopes for better weather, coach John LaPlace is anxiously awaiting to put the 1958 edition of the Beaver varsity baseball team through its first outlining work. Although the Lavender compiled a mediocre 3-11 record last season, coach LaPlace is optimistic about the coming campaign.

Last year's starting infield: Tony Pisciotta, first baseman; John Whelan, co-captain and second baseman; Bobby Demas, the team's leading hitter and co-cap­ tain at shortstop and Baruch Ronnie Weiss, third baseman. is returning intact for this year's play.

Bob Enard and Martin Knee brought up from last year's freshman team are promising infield members.

The pitching strength depends on the strong arms of two second­ baseman performers, southpaw Baruch Sta Weiss and the right­ handed Lou Mynar. Backing up this duo, are Mitch Streek, Les Rubinstein and fresh Nick Mar­ ris.

The varsity schedule consists of 17 games. The first game is with Rutgers University at New Brunswick April 1. May 3, the Beavers travel upstate to play the Black Knights of West Point.

In the second half, Hugh Kirwan and John Ryan combined with Seiden to put the game on ice for St. John's. Ryan took over the rebounding while Kirwan started setting Seiden up for jump shots and drives on which he drew fouls.

Delatorre who had been guarding him effectively in the first half could not cope with him in the se­ cond, as Seiden scored nine points in the nine minute stretch to bring up the lead 65-50 with two minutes remaining in the game.
