National Student Congress Opposes Loyalty-Oaths

The U.S. Student Senate, following the pattern of previous years, introduced a motion recently to strike out such tests when the 87th United States Congress convenes in January.

The American Civil Liberties Union has urged the president of the United States to sign a measure providing for the increased use of the loyalty oath for college students.

Gallagher Cuts Ribbon At Center Ceremonies

President Buell G. Gallagher officially opened the Baruch School Student Center Monday, September 19, by cutting a lavender-colored tape at the building's official opening.

The ribbon-cutting ceremony was attended by a large crowd of students and faculty members.

President Gallagher stated that the 'Wrap-Up' editorial of last semester did not represent the views of the National Student Congress, and that there is no "class war." He also emphasized the fact that the building was to be used by the students of the college.

The opening ceremonies were followed by a reception in the center's main lobby, where students and faculty members mingled and shared their thoughts.

He added that in the center the students should involve themselves in activities different from those they engage in within their classes and offices.

Randall Saxe, editor-in-chief of the paper, stated that the "charges are "true and substantiated."

Dr. Gallagher's article appeared in the next issue of the paper.
Stigmatized

The report recently released by President Harold C. Gallagher and the managing board of the school's newspaper contains some startling revelations. It seems that the school has been stigmatized in a way that is not immediately recognizable.

A great deal of the responsibility for this situation rests upon the editors of the school newspaper, who have not attempted to do anything to correct it. When the school newspaper printed the article mentioned above, the subject was initially selected by the modern political scene. He could have developed another story of more importance, and the machine was then called into action. Other column editors thought of heroes and their friends, and the paper was turned over to them. All the editors joined in the manner of presentation. As a result, New York overpaid the college. However, in view of the fact that the President's press statement was not even read by more than about 400 people, it is doubtful that his statement could have been overpaying the college.

The President has stated that he believes in a democracy, and in a democracy, one man may overpay the college, but in a democracy, his beliefs are not generally accepted. However, he has not recommended the school's publishing the belief.

In other words, the President has stated that he believes in a democracy, but the belief is not generally accepted. The belief is not generally accepted because the President has not stated it.

The belief is not generally accepted because the President has not stated it. The belief is not generally accepted because the President has not stated it.
