BHE Tuition Rights Approved by Senate

The State Senate approved Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller's education plan Friday and upped the group approved the provision which gives the New York City Board of Higher Education discretion as to whether tuition shall be charged at the four municipal colleges. Tuition fees in New York City are approved tuition-free by statute.

The bill will now go before the Assembly. A RHE spokesman indicated to THE TICKER that the bill will now go before the Assembly. The proposal was an attempt to give the Board of Higher Education discretion as to whether tuition shall be charged at the four municipal colleges. The city colleges are privately controlled but and approved tuition-free by statute.

The spokesman stated, however, that the bill is soundly in favor of higher education. The Senate, by a vote of 18-1-5, passed a motion to send a letter to THE TICKER concerning the seminar program and the lack of student attendance at the seminar last week.

The letter, presented by Dave Podoff, vice president of Student Council, states, "The first seminar, which was related to Algerian problems, Mr. Derfler of the History Department presented the historical background of Algeria in a well-informed and impressiv manner. The program was successful except for the fact that many students attended the seminar and consequently the benefits derived from it were not fully realized. Furthermore, seven of the fifteen students who attended were Student Council members."

Those in favor of the motion contended that the students must realize that a future leader of the country must be adequately acquainted with global and local problems that will confront them. They also argued that a college education does not include only classroom work and assignments, but also informative seminars, lectures, debates, and discussions.

Opponents of the motion stated that many students thought that in order to attend a seminar you must be well-versed in the topic. They also noted that the majority of students had previous commitments, homework, or classes to attend and thus were not able to make it to the seminar.
