Gallagher Appeals at Albany; Asks Mandatory Free Tuition

City College President Buell G. Gallagher addressed a breakfast gathering for members of the State Legislative at 8:30 this morning. THE TICKER learned early Wednesday that his speech was an appeal for state restoration of provisions for mandatory free tuition at the City University, a position the Brooklyn College staff will support.

At the breakfast were Joseph Carlino and Walter J. Macone, Speaker and majority leader of the State Senate and Assembly, respectively.

Next Tuesday, an informal cocktail party will be held for members of the State Assembly and Senate under the auspices of the Albany, affiliate of the City College Alumni Association.

At the party, appeals for free tuition will also be made.

A special bus to Albany will leave March 11. Information for this Brooklyn College sponsored project for all City University students, can be obtained from Ronald Novitz ’66, chairman of Student Council’s Free Tuition Committee. Once at Albany, the group will try to impress members of the State government of the feelings of the students at present free tuition-free schools.

That night, a motion will be made to discharge the mandatory free tuition committee among Baruch School students and their families, a sample-form letter was printed in last week’s Baruch Bulletin. The suggested form asks legislators to demand 1) that free tuition be again mandated for the City University; 2) free tuition at the State University, 3) free tuition at the community colleges.

Student groups working with the Student Council and THE TICKER to send these letters to the Hon. Nelson Rockefeller, Governor; the Hon. Joseph Carlino, Speaker of the Assembly, the Hon. Walter Macone, State Majority Leader, and their local state assemblies and senators.

Another publication active in the fight for free tuition is the Student Democrat, a newsletter of College Young Democrats. This publication declares that “free tuition has been a tradition, in fact the hallmark of the City University system since its inception over 115 years ago. We firmly believe that a common bond, a bond which ignores politics, is that a City of New York cannot go far wrong from being permitted to ask for help and cooperation.”

Another feared by the state government is to have more pressure on the Administrative Council of the City University to declare tuition.

Rosenberg To Albany For CUNY

By Jay Haberman

Dr. Gustave G. Rosenberg, chairman of the Board of Higher Education, addressed the Board of Trustees of the State Legislature at 8:30 this morning. THE TICKER learned earlier that his speech was an appeal for state restoration of provisions for mandatory free tuition at the City University.

Where Are We Going?

Dr. Gadol Discusses World’s Future

By Subscription Only

"Where Are We Going?" Dr. Joan Gadol addresses a large audience speaking at the Sigma Alpha sponsored lecture on "Brave New World" or "1984". Dr. Gadol discussed the political, economic, or moral constraints at all. In 1944, on the other hand, a society is portrayed in which there is propaganda, secret police, the rewriting of books to conform to the government's changing wishes, and the typical police state.

She declared, however, that this difference is not important when compared to the spirit of both societies.

There were a few in the "1984" society, Dr. Gadol noted, who retained their desire to decide their own destiny; not be forced by fortune, as were the majority. Like the main protagonist, Winston Smith, they were brainwashed and turned into human vegetables.

Since the minor bureaucrats like Smith could not undertake a revolution, she added, the task fell to the individuals’ capacity and desire to even want to make his own choices, they destroyed any chance of a new ethical system being developed.

Title: Ticker Tape

Responsibility

The term "Thirty Years of Responsibility Freedom" is often used by students and faculty to discuss the inner workings of the Ticker. This point expeditiously as they all play an active role in many facets of the university. However, it is the policy of this term's editorial board to recognize the responsibility of the author.

We asked to begin the semester that each letter will be accompanied by a name and a corresponding signature. Each letter will be numbered and a number under which his article. This was for the purpose of appropriate and easily identifiable marks which should precede the Ticker's name on this page.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor of THE TICKER:

The quotation attributed to me on page 2 is incorrect. I stated that we were transferred into the university, for if the other components are the same, it is true that we lack some of these points, one of which is the issue of capital punishment is not seen as a moral question and not a question of society to revert to the law of survival of the fittest, where the strongest and the most ruthless survive.

Two Different Worlds:

Silberdick Compares CCNY, Yale

By Ronnie Ward

Silberdick compared the students of CCNY and Yale, each of which offers a unique educational experience. The author discusses the differences between the two institutions and highlights the advantages of each. Silberdick visited both campuses and interviewed students and faculty to gather information for this comparison.

The author notes that both CCNY and Yale have their strengths and weaknesses. CCNY offers a more diverse student body and a more practical education, while Yale provides a more rigorous academic environment.

Card

Registration cards must be presented to the registrar's office by Friday. Any student who is not present at the time the cards are due will be charged a late fee.

Should There Be Capital Punishment?

No!

By Bob Brooks

It was with some interest that I read Florence Gross' article "An Eye for an Eye," which appeared in last week's issue of THE TICKER. It was an essay in which she argued against capital punishment. I must say that I was impressed by her arguments, but I was not convinced by her conclusion.

By Alain Granat

Much controversy has been raised by Florence Gross' article. As I mentioned in my column last week, "An Eye for an Eye," the views represented in Gross' article are not my views. I believe that capital punishment is a justifiable measure in certain situations.

Both Gross and I agree that capital punishment should be used only as a last resort. However, I believe that there are circumstances where capital punishment is necessary. For example, I believe that criminals who have committed heinous crimes should be punished accordingly.

Student Opinion

Yes!

By Alain Granat

I disagree with Gross' view that capital punishment is a barbaric and ineffective measure. I believe that capital punishment is a justifiable measure in certain situations. It is a measure of last resort that should be used only as a last resort.

Psych Society Holds Lecture

Dr. Paula Zucker, a prominent psychologist, delivered a lecture on the topic of "death" in the context of psychology. She discussed the psychological aspects of death and its impact on individuals and society.

AGENDA

- Introduction by Dr. Zucker
- Lecture on the psychological aspects of death
- Q&A session

The lecture was well-received by the attendees and sparked a lively discussion about the topic.

Influence in Teaching the Masses

By Paula Giangreco

The article discusses the importance of influence in teaching the masses. It highlights the need for educators to be aware of the potential impact of their teachings on the society and the individuals they are teaching.

Ironclad position and everything attached to it will be able to use their destructive power, claimed Mr. Rosenberg. He also stated that "there is no plausible way to make the population aware of the consequences of capital punishment."

Beavers Fail In Bid For First Division

By Lew Lipset

City College's basketball team failed in its bid for the Tri-State League's first place as Long Island University claimed the championship. The Blackbirds, 72-71, at Wingate Hall.

Both teams entered the game with 3.5 loop records, but the Blackbirds' comeback gave LIU the division title. The loss was the ninth in seventeen overall starts for City College. The victory gave LIU a 3-3 overall mark.

City appeared to be in control when they scored 38-28 at the half. Immediately after the second period, a basket by Steve Golden gave the Blackbirds a 42-37 advantage with four minutes remaining. In the final minute the teams scored nine consecutive points.

A major factor in the LIU comeback was the change in its defense. In the first half the Blackbirds came out in a zone defense, but the Beavers outside shooting, especially by Johnny Wykes and Don Sidat, helped LIU to a half-time lead. However, in the second period, LIU had also switched to a man-to-man defense and the Beavers could not score consistently from the floor.

Winniger (twenty-six) and Sidat (twenty-three) were the key players in the LIU's victory. Winniger led the teams' victory in the opening leg of the 400-yard medley relay by back-stroking to a new School and pool mark of 1:05.9 in the opening leg.

Nat Holman: Remembers Fordham Tilt of 1928

Nat Holman coached basketball at City College for thirty-seven years. His team played 610 games (winning 421). Despite the length of time and number of games, "Mr. Basketball" easily recalled a tilt played against Fordham in 1928. Holman reminisced Tuesday after the C.C.N.Y.-Ram encounter.

"It was an exciting game. We were losing at the half," the coach recalled. "Fordham moved ahead by something like fourteen points late in the game. But we fought back and took the lead, 26-25, with less than a minute left."

Although the contest was played thirty-five years ago, Holman almost recalled the exact events. Actually the Beavers trailed at the half 15-8, and fell behind 24-11 with eight minutes remaining.

The New York Times account captured the comeback: "A splendid rally by Nat Holman's pupils was launched and did not end until the City College five was within striking distance of its rival. From there it was close, but City College came through with flying colors."

The coach added, "With about the -half, he received a standing ovation from the crowd after the game."
