Final Examinations Schedule

The following is the revised final examination schedule. Although it was only a general guide to the helped students in their studies, many returned to the Student Association for help. The extension to sophomores is an attempt to broaden the freedom of students and responsibility of the students. Students Defeated In Action To Invalidate SC Elections

Student Council dashed the hopes of two students who sought to invalidate the elections for president and vice president in the Class of ‘64. The students, David Epstein ‘64 and Lawrence Singer ‘64 claimed they were unjustly disqualified from running for the top two positions, respectively, in their class, since they were mis-informed about to election procedures.

Harvey Lornberg ‘64, chairman of the Disqualifications Committee, said they were disqualified because they placed two positions on one application. Mr. Epstein and Mr. Singer entered S.C. president and vice president on their respective applications, in addition to the Junior Class offices.

Mr. Epstein asserted that he and Mr. Singer asked the person handling the desk in 104 of the Student Center if each of them could use one application for two positions. They were told, alleged Mr. Epstein, that this was permissible.

The resolution of the members of the Council was that Mr. Epstein and Mr. Singer were informed about the election rules they would have been aware of their irregularities in time to rectify it.

Baruch School students are seen, major, bright, and attractive," declared Professor Lorna Goldberg, husband of Dr. George Goldberg, President of Baruch College in Australia. He feels this most evident at the end of the season when the students

The University of Melbourne, located in Australia, is in the midst of a strike as the students in that country protest the war in Vietnam. The school, however, reported that all other universities in the country have been opened.

Aaron D. Goldberg, a former student at Baruch College, exclaimed: "We are all in agreement. The war is a disgrace and we demand that the United States leave Vietnam at once!"

The strike was the result of a student demonstration called by the University of Melbourne's student council, which is supported by the National Union of Students in Australia. The demonstration was called to protest the United States' involvement in the Vietnam war.

The demonstration attracted thousands of students and faculty members, who chanted slogans such as "No war," "Stop the war," and "End the war!" They also carried signs that reads "End the war," "Stop the war," and "End the war!"

The students also called for the United States to withdraw its forces from Vietnam and for a negotiated peace settlement. They also demanded that the United States pay reparations to the Vietnamese people for the damage caused by the war.

One Last Burrah

The word is spreading, it's not yet been officially made public, but a group of students at the University of Alabama have planned a last hurrah for the student-faculty relationship. It is their way of expressing displeasure with the way the relationship has been handled in the past.

What I have to say involves people and personality, not laws of art. It needs to be said, and will be.

The student-faculty relationship has been a topic of discussion for many years.
It is a relationship that is based on mutual understanding and respect.

Turning now to the student-faculty newsstand discussion, I would like to refer you to something I heard in a recent conversation with a colleague.

As I was walking down the hall, meeting people and discussing various issues, I heard a voice say, "You know, people talk about the relationship, but what do they really do?" I turned to look at the person who had spoken, and saw a member of the student body.

"I think," he continued, "that the relationship is a two-way street. People should not only talk about it, but also work towards improving it."

I couldn't agree more.

However, the press cannot realize its full potential without student help. Being the editor of a student newspaper, I have seen firsthand the importance of student input.

But the editor depends on students to provide not only content, but also support. It is a symbiotic relationship.

This year, for example, we have sought to increase the number of student-written articles. We have found that students are eager to contribute and that by working together, we can achieve improvement.

The student-faculty relationship is important because it affects the quality of education. It is through this relationship that students and faculty work together to ensure that the institution is providing the best possible education.

So what remains of the student-faculty relationship? As I see it, it is our responsibility to maintain and nurture this relationship. It is a relationship that we should be proud of, and one that we should strive to improve.
