Staff, Board Meetings Set

Decision Slated For October 23

A special meeting of all instructional staff and faculty members, at which a formal presentation of the report containing the recommendations of the Board of Higher Education Committee on the future of the Baruch School will be made, is scheduled for Monday at 2 in 4N, announced Professor James Sullivan (Law).

Professor Sullivan is chairman of the Committee to Safeguard the Future of the Baruch School.

At the meeting to be chaired by the law professor, another report will be presented to the faculty informing them of what transpired at the meeting held Wednesday night. (When the report was officially released) with Chancellor Albert Emanuel Saxe.

Other members of the committee include Associate Dean of Students David Neuman and Professors Abraham Briloff (Acct.), Andrew Lavender (Sub-chairman, Eng.) and David Valinsky (Stat).

Dean Emanuel Saxe "Challenging Possibility"

Robert Bowker and members of the BHE committee.

The purpose of the committee, which was created after the release of the City College Committee’s report last March, was "to assemble a future for the Baruch School," noted Professor Aaron Levenson (Mgmt.), a member of the committee.

The report suggested the downtown Brooklyn location for the new college, because it is "in a few areas of the city close by the Manhattan financial and business districts where large tracts of land are available to permit development of a campus." It is also accessible from Brooklyn, Queens and Staten Island which are most likely to expand in population the most.

Negotiations Continue

Currently the baruchmen are negotiating with Long Island University on the possible purchase of L.I.U.'s Brooklyn center, but Dr. Hoxie said "the report of the committee is not dependent on the purchase of L.I.U." L.I.U. is one of several possible sites in downtown Brooklyn wanted by Albert Bowker, chancellor of the City University. Another possibility is the Atlantic Urban Renewal Area.

Student Council Unanimously Passed a Motion last night in full support of the recommendation made by the special committee of the Board of Higher Education.

The motion reads:

Resolved, that the Student Council unanimously approves and praises the recommendation made by the special committee of the Board of Higher Education as regard to the Baruch School. The wisdom of this committee in its progressive and creative attitude toward higher education cannot be underestimated. This proposal, if enacted, will contribute to the totality of the university and only add much more to the greater centers of business education in the country.

We thank the board for including student representation in the final presentation of this report.
The report of the Board of Higher Education's Special Committee on the Future of the Baruch School will go up for approval by the B.H.E. at its October meeting.

If the board approves the recommendation of the second committee formed to find a solution to the Baruch School situation, then the proposal will have to be finalized by the Board of Regents.

The regents have jurisdiction and final approval in this area because the creation of a Bernard M. Baruch College will require a change in the City University's Five-Year Master Plan for Expansion.

"It has not yet been decided if the meeting at the board's headquarters, located at 555 East Eleventh Street, will be an open one."

"Thirty-Five Years of Responsible Freedom"

The report of the Baruch School's Educational Committee for the Future of the Baruch School will be made, scheduled for Monday at 2 in 4N, announced Professor James Sullivan (Law).

Small meeting of the Board of Regents was held in the C.U.N.Y. Board Room, attended by Chancellor Dr. Emanuel Saxe, Dean Emanuel Saxe (Challenging Possibility), Robert Bowker and members of the B.H.E. committee.

The purpose of the committee, which was created after the release of the City College Committee's report last March, was "to arrange a future for the Baruch School," noted Professor Aaron Levinstein (Mgt.), a member of the committee.

Other members of the committee include Associate Dean of Faculty David Neuman and Professors Abraham Briloff (Acct.), Andrew Lavender (Sub-chairman, Eng.) and David Valinsky (Stat.).

"Resolved, that the Student Council unanimously pass a resolution recommending that Baruch be reconstituted as an autonomous college of the City University of New York."

The report suggests the downtown Brooklyn location for the new college because "it is one of the few areas of the city closest to the Manhattan financial and business districts, where large tracts of land are generally available for development."

"The report also recommends that the College be located at a site which is the Atlantic Terminal Urban Renewal Area."

"The College will be present to the faculty with the purpose of providing one of the greatest centers for educational excellence in the country."
Report of the Special Committee on the Future of the Baruch School

Introduction

At its May 20, 1967 meeting, the Board of Trustees of Baruch College voted to establish a Special Committee of the Baruch Board of Trustees to study the institution's role and its responsibilities as an institution of public higher education in New York City. The Board's committee has only provided the framework within which, specialized knowledge and the availability of student financial independence from the local community. The present site of Brooky...

So the faculty and the administration of the Baruch School. We know that the student body has much to offer in the area of insight in curriculum, programming,
etc. We are sure we can contribute in the determination of policy for the new institution. We hope the board will continue as they have done in the past.
