Nine Run for SC Posts; NSA Referendum Slated

Nine students handed in petitions yesterday to qualify for one of the five executive board openings on Student Council at the regular School-wide elections next Wednesday. No one took out a petition for the post of Student Council Activities Committee Chairman and this sixth open seat shall remain unfilled.

In the order in which they will appear on the ballot, Sandy Alan Eagon '68 and Max Berger '68, the incumbent, will vie for the presidency of the Council.

Mr. Eagon is a representative of the Class of '68, chairman of the Student Body and a number of the Student-Faculty Disciplinary Committee.

A past secretary and vice president of the Council, Mr. Berger is running for his second term as president.

In the race for the second highest executive board position are Pat Morrow ’68 and Marvin E. Schecter ’68.

The faculty and staff of the Class of '68, the Theatron, and the Student Center are urging all members to attend the meeting yesterday afternoon when the elections were determined at the Theatron for the Class of '68.

Miss Elkin who represented the Class of '70 last year is currently chairman of the Council Affairs Committee Chairman.

By Geller ’68 is running uno pposed for the seat of Council Secretary.

Lexicon Last Day for Photos Set

Only two and one half weeks remain to purchase the School yearbook, Lexicon, for seven dollars. Beginning December 15, the cost of the publication will rise to twelve dollars.

Students who have not yet posed for their individual pictures must do so before Monday at Lorstan Studios, 1503 Third Avenue, near Eighty-fourth Street. They are open daily, including Saturday, from 9:30 to 4:30 and Thursday until 7.

"People have not purchased Lexicon ’68 because they say they don’t have money right now," commented Ed Buchholz ’68, editor-in-chief of the Journal. Mr. Buchholz could not understand their reluctance when the price will increase a substantial amount, five dollars.

Orders for Lexicon ’68 may be placed with either the Boosters who operate a booth in the lobby of the Student Center from 10 to 2 or by mail addressed to Lexicon ’68, care of the Baruch School, 17 Lexington Avenue.

The editor-in-chief noted that credits for participation in student activities will not be listed with the individual pictures. They will be placed in the back of the Journal to facilitate smoothness of layout, increase the room for credits, permit the use of larger candid shots taken around the School and generally save space.

A Challenge of Decision, Doctrines and Dialogue

The editors of this week's Ticker were surprised to find out that a challenge of decision, doctrine, and dialogue is currently taking place at this School. A factor in this challenge is the growing tension between the School's administration and the student body. The administration has been accused of suppressing student expression and limiting academic freedom. The student body, on the other hand, has been critical of the administration's policies and practices, particularly in the areas of admissions, financial aid, and curriculum.

The editors of this week's Ticker believe that the current challenge is an important development. It is a healthy sign of an engaged student body and a responsive administration. The editors encourage both sides to continue the dialogue and work towards a resolution that is fair and just for all.

Letters to the Editor

Relief Pots

To the Editor of The Ticker:

I am writing to express my support for the recent relief efforts in the Philippines. It is a tragedy when a natural disaster occurs, and I applaud the efforts of all those involved in the relief efforts.

Sincerely,

College Teams Commence Cage Campaigns

Teams Prepare Themselves For Winter Season

Lucia's Swordsmen Face the Test

BY MARC BLOOM

Within the next week, those who await the winter sports season will get a feel for how the teams fare in their initial forays of four other sports as each season begins to play for keeps. The Baruch School for Commerce, the home of the Maroons, is the varsity and business school, headquartered in a recent addition to the campus, which has opened up a new look to the campus.

The Men's basketball team will begin its season with a home game on the corner, where he is deadly. The Baruch School for Commerce, the home of the Maroons, is the varsity and business school, headquartered in a recent addition to the campus, which has opened up a new look to the campus.

Women's Cagers: Rounding Into Form

Mrs. Cohen Sees Tough Season

BY PETE CORSENTINO

With a women's touch, this year's three-female basketball team has been polishing their skills in an attempt to continue the trend established during last year's successful campaign.

Mrs. Roberta Cohen, the team's queen, looks forward to a "tough" season—one that should prove profitable for the female Beavers. The key to success is to Winter Door will be turned by Jean Eyret, who last season kept every point against New York University and Lillian Montalbano, whose all-around skills will give the girls a base from which to work.

Adding to her efforts will be the captain, Nika Sokal and Marion Linder, and spritely Anne Jacobs.

Mrs. Cohen says that "we're doing the best we can. We have strong girls on our team."

The distinction between men's and women's basketball effects this ball control and defense. For the men's game, five cagers are allowed to play on both offense and defense. But women's rules dictate a shift of only two players.

After the ball: Women's basketball team seen battling during a contest last season. In a few weeks they may challenge the varsity.

Sessions have been productive. The zealous females are bubbling with spirit and are determined to steamroll to the top of the loop. Their efforts will be on display when they open up against uptowners. Dec. 7. The Queen and all her little bees are ready.
