LIU Students Hold Rallies To Save Their Campus

More than 400 students and faculty from Long Island University's Brooklyn Center assembled at several crowded locations yesterday in an attempt to mount support for its drive to prevent the sale of its campus to the City University.

because Bernard Soloman, a member of its board of trustees, is also a member of the L.I.U. Board of Trustees, the major proponent of the sale.

The group first gathered at the Brooklyn campus at 10 to arrange their plans. They then dispersed arbitrarily to the respective sites.

Students will meet Thursday to evaluate their action and to decide what further steps are to be taken.

The leaflets distributed here by the Student Mobilization Committee. Some students expressed concern with the leaflets distributed by the Student Mobilization Committee. Some students felt that the leaflets were ambiguous. The steering committee decided to withdraw the leaflets from circulation and concentrate on a new theme. After discussion, the committee decided to use the theme "Stop the War in Vietnam Now."

The committee elected Bonnie Lindner '71, Sandy Eagon '68 and Hy Geller '65 as chairman, treasurer, and secretary, respectively.

Plans were formulated for writing letters to the faculty members urging them to boycott classes on April 26. Members of the steering committee expressed the hope that the strike would be close to one hundred per cent effective.

Representative Edwin W. Ainsberg '68, chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, said that the primary objective of the Student Strike "is to defeat America's determination to continue to support United States policy in Vietnam."

Buttons are being sold throughout the School to help pay for a full-page ad in The Ticker. The committee is also planning to print leaflets urging students to strike.

The strike is part of Vietnam Week '70-2 which will culminate with a mass demonstration on April 27 along Fourth Avenue. The exact meeting of the steering committee will be Thursday at 12:30 in 1231.

The Reverend Ronald S. Standish, New York- New Jersey Area Director of the Temple, discussed "The Pill and Birth Control" and "New Contraceptives" for the identification of the "live-young" groups of the Jewish Community. The discussion dealt with the development of science and the utilization of these methods as "social obligations" that are to be used as a basis for the discussion of their costs.

A Strike for Peace

On April 30 students and faculty throughout the University of California at Berkeley went out on strike. By this time it is impossible to say just how many people are out, nor is it certain how long the strike will last. But the point is this: the whole situation has been brought to a head by events which seems to necessitate a strike.

The one principle to emerge for and against the strike is simple—peace. It seems to be the only thing that all people can agree on. The strike is for peace. The one goal is to end all wars.

The "free love" movement may embarass the government, but it can't do it with the support of the people. If they can't, we can't.

The "free love" movement is a "mass production" process, in which the government can feel as satisfied as if they had done nothing. The government is doing nothing. They are doing nothing. They are not doing anything.

If the strike is unsuccessful, not only can we not do anything enough things to the government, in the interest of the people, but we can hope to improve conditions for those people that they do not do things.

In the number of classifications, Mr. Tigar seems to have for his "free love" people, and I don't think that's right. I think that's wrong. I think that's wrong for the people who are working for peace.

Mr. Finkel seems to have for his "free love" people, and I don't think that's right. I think that's wrong. I think that's wrong for the people who are working for peace.

Liu... may receive the buildings and name of the L.I.U. Brooklyn campus and continue the name of the L.I.U. Post University campus.

But can a student who has received his draft notice refuse to answer it, or at least to be drafted?

The answer is not clear. The draft board may ask a registrant who is under 21 years of age to answer the notice, but cannot legally be called until his name has been called to a draft board. In that case, he can ask the draft board to call him later. At the end of the statement it is suggested that provisions were made by the Board of Rights of the right to refuse induction when the registrant was under 21. At no point, however, does this statement of law include any other rights of which the registrant is not legally bound. In fact, the registrant is not legally bound to appear before a draft board. He is legally bound to appear before a draft board if he is legally bound to do so by law.

Finally, every registrant doesn’t have to answer the notice. As a result of the draft board decision in the case of Dan- niger, 320, N.Y., 896, the right of the registrant to refuse induction when the registrant is under 21 years of age is not legally binding. At no point is he legally bound to appear before a draft board. He is legally bound to appear before a draft board if he is legally bound to do so by law.

the only thing that is absurd. The first meeting of this club was held a few days ago, and the following are the resolutions passed by the members at that session.

1. Whereas child-beating is an immoral act that cannot be condoned, and whereas it is necessary to demonstrate condemnation of child-beating, and whereas a boycott of the Baruch School is the best way to demonstrate this condemnation, it is resolved that a boycott of the Baruch School should be urged for May 1, 1968.

2. Whereas dog-kicking is an immoral act, and whereas it is necessary to demonstrate condemnation of the aforementioned act, and whereas a boycott of classes is the best way to demonstrate that condemnation, it is resolved that a boycott of classes should be called for May 2, 1968.

3. Whereas motherhood is a good thing, and whereas those who dislike mothers are bad people, and whereas it is necessary to admonish these people, and whereas the most feasible method of admonishment is to strike the Baruch School, it is resolved that a strike of that School should be urged for May 3, 1968.

4. Whereas we are certain that no good can come from the earth's moving off its axis and spinning off into space, and whereas action must be taken to prevent the aforementioned spinning off, and whereas the best possible course of action is a boycott, it is resolved that a boycott of the Baruch School should be urged for May 4, 1968.

5. Whereas it is a fundamental truth that if one is not with you, one is against you, and whereas those persons who do not participate in the above mentioned boycotts are obviously not with us, and are, therefore, in favor of the policies we are condemning, it is resolved that these people be publicly censured for their extremist positions.

The next meeting of the Jean-Paul Sartre Club will be held shortly at the usual time and place (time: next full moon; place: Paul Bunyan's log cabin, Disneyland). The topic to be discussed at this meeting will possibly call for strikes of the Baruch School in support of love, peace, freedom, mental health, bathing, jelly apples, Charlie Chan, etc., etc.
