The New Stat Course
An Unfair Burden

Suddenly, as if sensing the threat to their life blood, students have sensed new requirements weighing down upon them. Nearly a year after a new curriculum for business was passed, someone seems to have realized that it might well be different from what had always existed. The present controversy centers around two courses which have become required, Business Policy 100, and Statistics 357.

Business Policy 100 is an interdisciplinary course in business which centers around decision making. All the work in the course involves solving problems, coming to decisions after considering a given situation. The other course in question, Statistics 357 is titled Introduction to Computer Concepts. The catalog description reads as follows: “A survey of basic principles of the operation of electronic digital computers and computer systems with special emphasis upon aspects related to business operations.”

The main question on the minds of the students today is whether the new Stat Course is required in addition to or in lieu of Stat 15, the old requirement. Neither the curricular Handbook nor the Undergraduate Bulletin lists 357 as a requirement, only 15. Russell Fochne, who was a student representative to the deliberations of both the Curriculum Committee and the Stat faculty, was unclear as to what really happened in this regard.

“The student council proposal,” he recalls, “was to substitute 357 for fifteen on the grounds that a working knowledge of computers is more valuable than the arithmetic of Stat 15.” He says that he thought that this was what was adopted, but it was not sure. “In any case,” he continues “I have seen the many applications of which I learned in Stat 15, it has been an invaluable tool. The computer course is also an important tool,” he notes, “so the recommendation is not to substitute it.”

The President did admit that he was unsure as to the amount of work to be required of students, the college will not be able to sell the students a certain amount of flexibility, a certain number of options, it is a very serious one. As of now, it can be said that our information between floors is a bad joke. However, with elevators, which cannot handle the present student body; are delayed as long as an increase in the student population as Open Enrollment will entail, it will cause a certain number of problems.

Thieves Strike Again
Make Off With Loot

Apparently, the frustrations our robbers experienced last week during their vain attempt to burglarize the school were not enough for the robbers experienced last week. Suddenly, as if sensing the thieves chanced upon $300 in one dollar bills hidden in the bottom of the ice cream freezer. Carlos Vazquez is about to look into the situation. They will find out just what the requirement is, he thought that this is what was adopted, but it was not sure. “In any case,” he continues “I have seen the many applications of which I learned in Stat 15, it has been an invaluable tool. The computer course is also an important tool,” he notes, “so the recommendation is not to substitute it.”

Administration Silent
On Open Enrollment

There is an official silence, on the part of the administration of Baruch, concerning the plans that are being formulated to accomodate the 600-650 extra students that will be admitted to the College this September under the Open Enrollment plan.

During a telephone conversation, President Weaver denied to release a copy of the report of the Committee on Open Enrollment, which contains the suggested plans and procedures for dealing with the Open Enrollment situation at Baruch, to The Ticker. His reasoning was that the report only contained the committee's recommendations and not the final set of plans that the faculty members might get upas if the contents of the report were prematurely released.

This same flimsy line of reasoning was used to deny The Ticker a copy of the report in which the suggested alternatives to colloquium, which, as reported last week, had, very, very dubious future, are contained.

Ticker Interviews
Dean Lavender

by ROBERT BARRETT

The School of Liberal Arts in Baruch College is one year old. To mark this historic occasion The Ticker spoke with Dean Andrew Lavender.

Most of the students in Baruch College are concerned with one thing—the curriculum; or, to use a more exact term, “What do I have to take to get out of here?” Keeping this in mind, it was felt that the interview with Dean Lavender should be aimed at this point. Some Liberal Arts students are a bit confused as to their course of study.

According to the Dean, a proposal on a curriculum is under discussion. The curriculum committee has presented a four year plan to the full faculty. The proposal is being debated, discussed, revised and reconsidered. An oral examination will be offered at the next meeting early in March. As far as the present curriculum goes, Dean Lavender said, “Although the curriculum has begun to shape itself and we have a small group of Liberal Arts students a certain amount flexibility, a certain number of options, it is a selection of courses. I could have hoped that in many instances the courses themselves, where possible and desirable, had been re-organized, re-examined and re-totaled; approached with a continuous eye on the interest, and needs of a changing student body.”

It is obvious, when speaking with Dean Lavender, that he has a great interest in the student himself. He would like to see (Continued on Page 5)

Pollution Conference

The余名 sponsor the National Pollution and the Environment (SCOPE) with assistance from the Federal Water Pollution Control Administration and has held its first workshop on pollution which was opened on 1100 E. Washington St., New York City on February 10th.

The conference included discussions on the causes and effects of pollution, and the measures being taken to control it. It was attended by representatives from government agencies, environmental organizations, and private companies.

Dr. John Smith, a prominent environmentalist, delivered the keynote address. He emphasized the importance of public awareness and education in combating pollution. He also highlighted the need for more comprehensive legislation to protect the environment.

...other such organizations. The one I really like is the British Council. They have their house which is interestingly located on 11th Street, near the University of Virginia. It's a beautiful house. We had lunch at Pizza Lederi. I think it was a good choice for a change.

The conference was held in cooperation with the American Association for the Advancement of Science. It was a great opportunity to meet and discuss issues related to pollution with experts from different fields.

At the first Student Seminar, which was held at the Student Center, we had an extraordinary performance by a student. His last minute replacement of Naaman, a troubleshooting, a Balancer, a Gusher, is a remarkable young man.

The Seminar, sponsored by the Student Council On Pollution and Environmental Awareness, is a wonderful warm up of people. I hope to see that many of our students and guests will be able to attend.

Walter J. Heckel on water pollution matters.

With appreciation your bringing this invitatily, student organizations, and just wish to contact me at the above address. We would appreciate you joining us to discuss and become involved in future workshops.

We look forward to the day in which pollution will no longer be a problem. We need to continue working towards a cleaner, healthier environment for all.

AROUND THE CAMPUS

Generous Problems Are Key To Style

The Baruch College in New York City has seen an increase in generosity among students, who are expressing their support through gifts and donations to the university. This trend is not limited to financial support; many students are also donating their time and talents to various campus organizations.

The generosity is seen in the form of donations to the university's athletic teams, which have benefited from increased fundraising efforts. Students have also contributed to the construction of new facilities and the improvement of existing ones. The university has acknowledged these contributions by offering scholarships and other forms of recognition.

Despite the financial challenges faced by many students, they continue to demonstrate their commitment to the university. This is a testament to the strong sense of community and pride that exists among Baruch College students.

Sincerely,

Faculty Nuts

Statistics 357

There were no changes in the statistics for the past year. The number of students enrolled in the course remained consistent with previous years. The students have been actively participating in class discussions and assignments.

Withholding Information

There have been no changes in the withholding information for the past year. The administration has continued to provide accurate and up-to-date information to students regarding their financial obligations.

Robbery

There have been no new developments in the case of the recent robbery. The investigation is ongoing, and the police are working diligently to apprehend the perpetrator.

Faculty Nuts

The Morris County College Board of Trustees has approved a new program that will offer a broader range of courses and programs of study. The new program will include courses in business, liberal arts, and sciences.

The new program is expected to attract more students and enhance the educational opportunities available at the college. The trustees have expressed their commitment to providing a high-quality education to all students.

Sincerely,

The Ticker

BARUCH SCHMOOZES N.Y. TECH

In a past week or so, students of Baruch and N.Y. Tech have been spending their evenings in each other's company on the theory that friendship can be strengthened through warm bear hugs.

Baruch is a collection of students who like to party. N.Y. Tech is a collection of students who like to study. And the news is that these two schools have found a way to get along.

The idea is simple. Each week, a group of students from each school meet for dinner and drinks at a local restaurant. The dinner is followed by a game of pool, and then it's back to the bars for more socializing.

The bar and wall of students are now so accustomed to each other that they can now be seen conferring about the fate of the universe at 2 a.m.

THERE'S A NEW SONG in town, it's called "The Joint" and it's got all the girls wearing sweaters with "Peace" written on them.

AROUND THE CAMPUSES

BY ELIZABETH WATSON

"THE AMERICAN EXPERIENCE IN HISTORY & GOVERNMENT" is a new course at Baruch College designed to provide students with a broad understanding of the political and social conditions that shaped the United States from its founding to the present day.

The course is divided into two parts: Part I focuses on the political and social development of the United States from its founding to the Civil War, while Part II covers the period from the Civil War to the present day.

The course is taught by Professor John Smith, who has a Ph.D. in American history.
