BARUCH COLLEGE, SEPTEMBER 18, 1973

NO. 2

STUDENTS TO VOTE ON CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT

The Department of Compensatory Education, through a lack of planning, poor planning, or gross mismanagement, caused many complications during freshman registration this summer, Ticker has learned.

- Freshmen blockprogrammed for the first time, the Department blockprogrammed (or reprogrammed all) 1200 freshmen before freshman registration. In other words, it made out the courses-and-sections. They had to be reprogrammed.
- Poor planning of the Department of Compensatory Education caused 600 other freshmen, who were not blockprogrammed, to be closed out of many important and necessary courses, such as Accounting 101, Management 120, and Freshmen Seminar.

The Department, however, created problems for entering freshmen and the Registrar's Office (who staffed the rest of the freshmen as they made out their programs). Omission of required courses and the failure to follow guidelines set by the deans of the three schools of the College also caused errors made by the department. The following are more:

- Freshmen Seminar was not placed on the schedule of a large part of the 1200 freshmen whose programs were programmed at the beginning of the year. Freshmen Seminar is required for all freshmen. They were supposed to be programmed at freshman registration.
- Many freshmen were not notified of the errors made by the department. The following are more:
- Freshmen students who were blockprogrammed were made up by the Department of Compensatory Education without consultation with students. They were not allowed to change their programs without the permission of Dean Mitchell, the head of Compensatory Education. New freshmen, who work, or who need certain hours free for personal reasons, have been greatly inhibited.
- The poor planning of the Department of Compensatory Education caused 600 other freshmen, who were not blockprogrammed, to be closed out of many important and necessary courses, such as Accounting 101, Management 120, and Freshmen Seminar.
- Many freshmen were not notified of the errors made by the department.
- Poor planning of the Department of Compensatory Education caused 600 other freshmen, who were not blockprogrammed, to be closed out of many important and necessary courses, such as Accounting 101, Management 120, and Freshmen Seminar.

The problem above was created by an anti-city politician can be to cope with such a serious condition. Those who welcome the law should look behind the two-page ads and television announcements and more into coming to grasp with the drug dilemma.

To illustrate the emphasis on public policy and not on prevention, the look at the official pamphlet which contains the dogma of the drug law. The booklet is entitled "New York State Drug Abuse Control Commission, N.Y.S. Drug Abuse Control Commission. One line states: "The individual seeking treatment should contact the New York State Drug Abuse Control Commission at these telephone numbers: In New York City, 246-9300. Elsewhere in New York State, 246-9300."

The rest of the 22 pages are filled with programs, statements, questions and answers, New York doesn't even get a toll-free call!

Little is written or heard about prevention and constructive prevention. The two stated purposes of the new law are: 1) to deter all citizens from abusing certain types of illegal and controlled substances by State law, and 2) to help any citizen who is, or may be imminent danger of becoming, dependent on these drugs.

A highly desirable and earnestly appreciatted by our course of action was the issue of a comprehensive directory of student services, new with updates published as the need arises, rather than individually issuing such data by the classified elements of those services. However, no directory needs to be made more generally available to students.

Student newspapers have had small bits of information dribbling in from the city, but this newsletter is so new, the directory needs to be made more generally available to students.

Baruch's Campus: The Students' View

With the coming of the present academic year, Baruch has become the new profile of colleges—it comes in widely separated, difficult-to-find parts and is not very interesting when you do find it.

At last count, there are six different buildings occupied either in whole or in part by Baruch College. They include the Student Center and the School Street; their ages of construction vary from five to two years.

The Department of Community Education are the official sponsors of the School Street. Student Center to the Student Center, they are the backbone of the anti-city politician can be to cope with such a serious condition.

Ticker has learned that there are several libraries and cataloguing of errors made by the department. However, such information, as to where it is and what it is doing, and as the data is received it is put into the newspaper for dissemination. However, such information, separate and fleeting, tends to be pulled together by a college better serves the student agency and makes available student avenues of information.

And that, really, is what the game is all about.
At Long Last, Published

Since last fall, we have heard that the student evaluation of their classes' handouts, which should have been distributed. Many students waited in vain for these handouts to be published, hoping that it would be published in time for registration for the fall semester. Now, we have heard that it would be published in time for freshmen registration during the summer break, and we will receive it when we vote next week.

While we are glad to see that "Publish or Perish" has finally come to be, there are still a few drawbacks. Firstly, the handouts are not a complete set, as many have been omitted. Secondly, the distribution is not uniform, with some students receiving their handouts on time, while others are still waiting. However, we must remember that this is a step in the right direction, and we should give credit where credit is due.

Mistakes Can Be Costly

The Department of Comparative Education had a good idea when it decided to plan the programs for freshmen. However, the implementation of these ideas was flawed, resulting in mistakes that could be costly for the students.

For Your Own Good

When we are told that our mistakes can be costly, we must take it to heart. As students, we are responsible for our own education, and we must take the necessary steps to ensure that we do not make costly mistakes.
