Food Service Committee Holds First Meeting Discusses Improvements

By Nina Dobris

A food service committee has been formed at Baruch College. The committee is comprised of six students, two of whom were involved in the selection of the new vendor, Educational Refreshments, Inc. (ERI), Associate Dean of Students Ron Aaron, Jay Roth, manager of ERI, and Dr. Carl Kirschner.

Aaron's aim for the committee is "to develop an ongoing structure to allow for opportunity to hold regular meetings between students and ERI." The committee provides a mechanism for students to have an ongoing dialogue with the vendor and, in turn, be able to use the committee's feedback for improvement on its part," said Aaron. The meetings will give Roth an opportunity to raise his own issues, such as what to include on the menu.

Some major concerns discussed at the committee's first meeting held February 23 were:

- The provision of kosher foods.
- Price lists and tax rates.
- Double-checking the cash registers so students can double-check the cashier's computations.
- The food prices are largely set by the vendor, ERI. They are also supposed to pay $32,000 to Baruch as a commission.
- The unavailability of any software other than MacWrite and Macintosh.
- The mouse (the small box that replaces the cursor keys) technology is "not serious enough." Bauer added that switches wouldn't have to "scramble" to take notes. She also said, "The committee is not a serious enough machine for business applications and the mouse (the small box that replaces cursor keys) technology is not realistic in this business and is more of a gimmick," DiMeo would rather that students get used to the IBM PC since it is the industry standard.
- The availability of any software other than MacWrite and MacPaint is another problem. Any Hirsch, manager of the Microcomputer Lab, said, "Software is the most important thing about computers."
Dear Editor,

In your February 26, 1984 editorial, you questioned the other B.S. (butter screws) on the CUNY campus, referring to them as "You, the students," as if the students were required to purchase a Macintosh computer. We require them to purchase a Macintosh computer because the students are more than likely to use the computer. By not having any such system available at CUNY, students will be split into two groups—those who are able to purchase a Macintosh at $1,100, and those who cannot. Therefore, most students will have a Macintosh computer. At CUNY, there is no plan for payment to be made in installments, and the students who purchase the computer will be required to purchase the entire computer. The price is figured into tuition allowing for financial aid to cover the cost.

Occupational Questions

The Student Council of the Day Session Student Government (DSSG) has proposed a revised constitution. This proposal will be voted upon by students in a referendum to be held in May. There are a number of criticisms.

Article VI would allow the student council to set a quorum as one-sixth (free) of the members, out of a total of twenty, if a majority of the members could not be assembled at the previous meeting. This is a more equitable arrangement than the proposal as it is now. It is likely that more faculty members will purchase a Macintosh. Those who do not own a Macintosh will be disadvantaged in the classroom, since those students who do purchase the computer will be required to purchase the entire computer. The price is figured into tuition allowing for financial aid to cover the cost.

This matter is important because CUNY should actively seek funds to allow all students to purchase a Macintosh. It is not enough to say that the cost of a Macintosh computer will be covered by financial aid. The cost of a Macintosh computer is $1,100. the money for a variety of things is one step toward meeting the problems.

The first step toward meeting the problems is to find a way to increase the library's budget. One way to do this is to increase the money for the library's activities. The second step is to increase the library's budget by increasing the amount of money available to the library.

The University has increased the library's budget by increasing the amount of money available to the library.

The library is a very important part of the University. It is a place where students can go to find information and to study. It is also a place where students can go to find out about the University and its programs.

The library is also important to the University because it is a place where students can go to learn about the University and its programs. The library is also important to the University because it is a place where students can go to learn about the University and its programs.

We hope that the University will continue to support the library and its programs.

The Encyclopedia Brown--type detective nature of the novel lends itself well to Miss Hildreth’s advanced reading level. It also appealed to me because the plot was not too complicated to follow, and the language used was quite understandable. I enjoyed reading this book and would recommend it to other interested readers.

Death Penalty

In his article, “Changing the Legal System,” Edward Tidman points out that capital punishment is an outdated method of justice. He argues that the death penalty serves no purpose in modern society and that there are more effective ways of dealing with violent offenders. I agree with Tidman’s perspective. While capital punishment may seem like a deterrent to some, its effectiveness is questionable. Furthermore, the death penalty is often applied arbitrarily and unfairly, leading to the execution of innocent individuals. Instead, we should focus on rehabilitation and reintegration programs that can help offenders turn their lives around and reduce the likelihood of future criminal behavior.

Where's the beef? In restaurants and delis around Baruch!

By Minny Tavares

The fire alarm went off in the 23rd Street building on March 1, 3:15. Then, it went off for the second time, at 3:51. Why? I was trying to stay around long enough to find out whether the fire alarm was real or false. I went to my friends that we go for some food at a Spanish restaurant. Hueso suggested Mexican. I mentioned Chinese. Hence suggested Mexican. We decided on Mexican.

We headed for El Mariachi (24th St. between 2nd and 3rd). Hitting 3rd Avenue on our way to the 23rd Street elevators.

The restaurant's menu is typically Mexican with items such as beef and steak entrees, tacos, burritos, and seafood. Entrées and tacos were at the center of the dishes ordered by Collins, Aravu, and Ralph. Collin had difficulty deciding on what to order. We chose the owners' recommendation because of the large menu number. I ordered Shrimp Ceviche because it isn't spicy. Each order was in the nine-dollar range.

The food service was supplied by Tasty-f and you can see "onions" on the corner of 24th Street.

The consensus was that the restaurant had shied away from the alld "2nd Avenue food service was supplied by Tasty-t. Maybe, the food service was supplied by Tasty-t. Maybe, the food service was supplied by Tasty-t.

Stuarents who do not have a background in music but are interested in the industry have the opportunity to become involved in music-related events at Baruch. The Music Industry Department offers a variety of courses and workshops that provide hands-on experience in the industry. Students can also take advantage of the Music Industry Board, which is responsible for organizing events and activities. By participating in these events, students can gain valuable experience and connections in the music industry.

Lt. Gov. DeBello To Speak

The keynote speech of this year’s Italian Heritage Series, sponsored by the Italian Heritage Club and the Department of Romance Languages and Literatures, will be delivered by Lieutenant Governor of New York, Angelo J. DeBello. His topic: "The Italian-Americans in New York: 1890 to 1930."

DeBello, who was born in 1921 in New York City, is the son of Italian immigrants. He graduated from New York University with a degree in political science and returned to his native city after graduation. DeBello served in the U.S. Army during World War II and later became a lawyer. He was elected to the New York State Assembly in 1954 and served as Speaker of the Assembly from 1961 to 1963.

DeBello was appointed to the state cabinet in 1963 by Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller and served as the state's economic development director. He was later appointed as commissioner of the New York State Urban Development Corporation and served as chairman of the New York State Development Council.

DeBello has been an active supporter of Italian-American causes and has been involved in various community organizations. He is a member of the Italian-American Bar Association and the Italian-American Cultural Institute. He has also served as a director of the Organization of Italian American Techniques and the Italian American Cultural Foundation.

DeBello has written several books on Italian-American history, including "The Italian-Americans in New York: 1890 to 1930." His speech will be held in the Student Union Ballroom, with refreshments available.

Sid Bernstein Sings The Blues?

By Elizee Katave

I have heard some interesting experiences and some tremendous success in the field of the blues. I have met Sid Bernstein while attending a blues festival and was very impressed with his dedication to the music. Sid has been involved in blues music for many years and has built a successful career in the business. He has a deep understanding of the blues genre and has dedicated his life to promoting and preserving the music. Sid is an exceptional blues musician and a true blues lover. He has consistently performed at various blues festivals and events, and has earned a reputation as one of the best blues performers of his generation. His passion for the blues is evident in his music, and he has inspired many others to follow their dreams and pursue their love of the blues.

Kinks: Unpredictable, Underrated

The story of the Kinks is a story of two brothers, Brian and Dave Davies, who grew up in the working-class town of Muswell Hill in North London. The band's music is a blend of hard rock, pop, and folk, with a strong social commentary. The Kinks were formed in 1964 and quickly rose to fame with their catchy songs and satirical lyrics. The band's success was built on a series of hits, including "You Really Got Me," "Deduction, Precipitation," and "Waterloo Sunset." The band's sound was characterized by their unique guitar playing, with Brian Davies' use of the Farfisa organ and Dave Davies' distinctive rhythm playing.

The Kinks were known for their unpredictable and carefree attitude, which was on display in their music and their personal lives. The band's lead singer, Ray Davies, is known for his humorous and wry lyrics, which often reflect the struggles and foibles of working-class life. The band's music was often critically acclaimed, and their influence can be seen in the work of countless other bands who have come after them.

The Kinks continue to be a popular and influential band, and their music remains a staple of rock and roll. Their legacy is a testament to their enduring popularity, and their music will continue to be enjoyed by generations to come.
Laddomada Comes Home

By Mike Lashinsky

The American novelist Thomas Wolfe is noted for his quote, "you can’t go home again." However, Peter Laddomada, a Baruch alumnus, would probably disagree with this statement. This is because at age 26, Peter Laddomada is the Baruch Statesmen’s new baseball coach.

As reported in the February 28th Ticker, Athletic Director Dr. William Eng had offered Laddomada the job. However, this situation was complicated by the fact that Baruch might not have fielded a team. However, both of these situations are now resolved. Baruch will have a baseball team and Laddomada will be the coach.

According to Laddomada there was little doubt about his accepting the job as the baseball coach. In listening to him it is obvious that sports are an extremely vital part of his life. "I coached baseball at St. Catherine’s of Alexander in Borough Park, Brooklyn. We raised $5,000.00 in two months and bought new equipment. We were contenders in the first year. "

Besides this Laddomada has also coached basketball. "I coached basketball at St. Catherine’s of Alexander and also at St. Frances de Chantal," the latter being the school where he now teaches math and English.

In coming to Baruch to coach, Laddomada realizes that the program needs quite a few changes. Laddomada plans to effect these changes. "You have to start from the beginning. I plan to wipe out all the old attitudes and ideas."

One aspect of Laddomada’s character that highlights this determination is his managing style. Laddomada characterizes this style as unlike anyone else. "I’m my own individual self. I’m unique. I go for 1500% of players’ ability. If we were winning by 20 runs I want to win by 25. We’ll play hard and won’t take a day off."

This hard-work ethic is important because he feels that other teams can sense when their opposition is depressed. "Other teams can tell when you’re down. They then take advantage of this." As a result of this Laddomada vows to keep himself and his team alert and always on their toes. "I’m not going to sit back. I’ll be cheering more than they (the players) will."

In attempting to revive the once powerful Statesmen, Laddomada explains this grueling part of practice. "Thus will run extensive practices throughout each week. In one part of the practices Laddomada wants to strengthen and rhythm. In these parts of practice such as pitching and double play coverage will be worked on. However, there is another part of practice which males and females competed in the school as Laddomada explains this grueling part of practice. "The first hour and a half is a grueling part of practice. We work on the legs, calves, thighs, and the stomach. We also do jumping jacks, squat thrusts, push-ups and sit-ups."

By doing this Laddomada plans to improve the stamina and strength of his players.

This attitude of determination and optimism also pervades other aspects of the school as Laddomada explains. "The school is interested in baseball. Thus they’ve purchased new equipment and new uniforms."

In addition, "Dr. Eng has been extremely helpful in assisting me." Although Laddomada has received much help from the administration, he must ultimately rely on the players. Thus Laddomada has tried to attract quality players even though many of the students go to school and hold down jobs. In order to appeal to players Laddomada along with Dr. Eng have tried to create a schedule which is conducive to players’ free time. This was done by scheduling many weekend games and many games during spring break.

In addition to the players another important component of the team assistant coach John Krochak. Laddomada plans to utilize Krochak’s knowledge and skills to the fullest. "No decision will be made unless I first discuss it with him," said Laddomada. In addition, because Krochak was a pitcher for the Statesmen Laddomada plans to have him work with the team’s pitching. "John will help out with the pitching. He’s very good on location."

In taking on this job Laddomada realizes that he has a difficult task at hand. However, he is not hesitant in tackling this problem. "I want to win every game. I don’t want to be a .500 team. I’ve seen teams turn around fast." Laddomada then stops and in closing echoes the clarion call for the upcoming baseball season. "I think this is a start to something big."

Swim Team Has High Hopes For Season

By Orest Mandzy

On February 15th, the newly-formed Baruch Swim Team competed and lost against the United States Merchant Marine Academy in Kings Point, Long Island. The final score was 60-51. According to coach Eric Gerstein, "although we lost a close game, we showed a lot of spirit. So much spirit and enthusiasm that the USSMAA coach, Sue Peterson, was overwhelmed." This meet, being the first for the young swim team, ended up in defeat simply because the Statesmen have never competed inter-collegiately. According to Gerstein, "We would like to, eventually, enter into a competitive conference, if the program could get stronger." As it stands now, the Statesmen compete outside an organized league. Every meet is scheduled tentatively between other non-league and league schools.

Since Baruch is a Division III school, no prospective high school graduate is allowed to be entered into enrolling at Baruch with a scholarship. Since the swimmers aren’t soliciting them, they must train more strenuously. "This is sometimes impossible, because of scheduling conflicts between class time and training time," said Gerstein.

The swim team, still does, however, train extensively both here at Baruch’s own pool, and at Hunter College, which has an Olympic-sized pool. The team trains 6 days a week and each swimmer swims about 3500 yards every day. This arduous training schedule has apparently paid off for the aquatic athletes. "At this meet," according to Gerstein, "many of our swimmers accomplished personal bests."

Finally, this meet was a co-ed meet, in which males and females competed together. Coach Gerstein pointed out that many times this could be unfair so league meets are not organized in this manner. Although teams are co-ed, competitions are usually held within each sex. Even though Baruch’s first meet was co-ed, it did not look as if anyone was at a disadvantage. Elaine Morawek, a 100 and 200 yard backstroke placer third, swam in a heat that included two men. Kirsten Van Kapel, another backstroke specialist, placed fourth. In the 500 yard freestyle Sonya Schechter, and Gene Meyer finished fourth and third, respectively. Donn Lloyd came in second, Rene Goddard in fourth, and Gene Meyer came in first in the 50 yard freestyle. Coach Gerstein noted, "I guess we’ve got some springers."

The breaststroke, apparently Baruch’s strong point, saw Baruchians Romaine Pissi finish third and Pedro Bracho finish third in the 100 yard race. They also finished first and second in the 200 yard race. In the 200 yard freestyle, Sonya Dunlop finished fifth, with Alan Dillon in fourth, and Gene Meyer in third. In what coach Gerstein called "a very tough stroke," the 100 yard butterfly saw Peter Dizac place third. An Individual Medley (IM) is a race in which contestants swim certain distances utilizing different strokes. Pitted against an all-male competition, Elaine Morawek and Sonya Dunlop finished an impressive second and third, respectively in the 200 yard IM. Donn Lloyd came in fifth, Alan Dillon in fourth, and Lewis Schelchere in third in the 100 yard freestyle. The 200 yard IM relay, a very close race, had the team of Morawek, Pissi, Schelchere, and Dillon come in second.

Coach Gerstein cited his team for spirit and desire to win. He said, "I’m very proud of them, they’re a great bunch of athletes, the entire team has a lot of potential." He added, "The team was psyched and rarin’ to go, the meet started off on a great high."

Baruch is a business-oriented school, which therefore rarely attracts an accomplished athlete. The fact that athletes can’t be recruited also hinders the sports program. In the event that talent is found, limited training schedules and class conflicts occur. Thus the athletes must maintain an adequate GPA as well as train whenever they can. The Statesmen have attempted to prove the old maxim that in order to be competitive, what you lack in talent you make up for in desire to win. According to the opinions of Coach Gerstein, the team has what it takes to win.
