Minority Alumni Ass’n. Blocked by Administration Both Sides Deadlocked

By Michele Kern

During a meeting on April 5, President Joel Segall denied for the third time this year the sanc­tion of the Black and Hispanic Alumni Association Ad-hoc Committee, a group designed to give minority students a support base and meet their unique concerns.

The two groups have been unable to reach a decision or compromise since the Black and Hispanic Committee announced their proposal to form an independent Alumni Association in June, 1982. The meeting was attended by Segall, Vice President of Development Steven Wertheimer, Dr. Donald Smith, former chairperson of the Black and Hispanic Faculty Caucus and committee representative Joe Sellman, and Dr. Francis Atinfio, former chairperson of the Black and Hispanic Committee.

The president contends that “the recognition of a separate organization would cause unnecessary competition” for the 16-year-old Alumni Association and “would divide the student population.”

The Black and Hispanic Committee’s two main objectives, according to the president, are the high drop-out rate and improving job placement. “We know that our drop-out rate is high,” he said, “and we are eager to get the assistance from the Black and Hispanic Committee in this matter.”

Ron Schurin, the Director of The Office of Institutional Research at Baruch, states that only 29 percent of the minority students enrolled in 1978 graduated by 1983, while 65 percent remained in school, leaving a 65 percent rate of attrition.

To address the problem, the Baruch College Fund appropriated $12,000 to peer-tutoring and counseling services last year. There was also a Spanish library established where students using English as a second language could get special attention.

The president also acknowledges the problem of attrition. “It’s a problem we’ve had for a long time.”

Wertheimer sees “an enormous improvement in placement due to an increase in the number of corporations that came to Baruch this year.” According to Ed Samuels, who handles the Placement Office, 150 corporations came to Baruch in 1984.

“The students’ major is also a factor,” explains Schurin. “Accounting, Computer Science, and Finance do very well,” said Wertheimer. Segall agrees, and adds, “The median income for a Baruch graduate after the first year is $21,000. After five years, it is $27,000 for computer and accounting majors.”

Wertheimer later acknowledged that “there is a small problem, but this is not a unique one to blacks or Hispanics — it affects all students.”

Sellman, according to CUNY’s Office of Institutional Research, said there were not many journals in the Black Studies field and in newspapers like the New York Amsterdam News, The New York Amsterdam News.

The objectives of the Black and Hispanic Alumni Association Ad-hoc Committee are:

1. To create a viable and independent organization and Hispanic Alumni Association to promote the aspirations of the college community and its Black and Hispanic alumni.

2. To establish a base of support for Black and Hispanic students and a system by which they may realize their educational and career objectives.

Black and Hispanic Studies Professor Denied Tenure Hearing May 10 On Case

By Ivan Cintron

After being re-appointed for the past five years, Arthur Lewin, assistant professor of Black and Hispanic Studies, has been denied tenure by President Joel Segall.

Lewin has taken his case to the Professional Staff Congress, where it is under grievance and will be heard May 10. In addition, students in his classes are drawing up petitions to support him.

Lewin said he went through the proper appeals, but the president decided “on his own to deny me tenure in a detailed letter, he said the strength of my qualification was inadequate.” He criticized my work, and said that I haven’t done anything worth anything.”

The standard procedure for a professor to obtain tenure is to appear before one’s respective department’s Promotion Committee. If passed, the case then goes on to the School Faculty Personnel and Budget Committee. From there, the professor appears before the College Personnel and Budget Committee. If turned down, as Lewin was, the professor may go to the Academic Review Committee. If turned down, as Lewin was, the professor may go to the Academic Review Committee. If turned down, as Lewin was, the professor may go to the Academic Review Committee. If turned down, as Lewin was, the professor may go to the Academic Review Committee.

Also, a booklet will be published in The Wall Street Journal. Reagan’s campaign will be directed toward the eight economic-, defense-, education-, and environment-related questions for the LTV 1984 Leadership Series.

As sponsor of the series, Baruch mailed the eight questions to the President, to those who had qualified for federal matching funds: Reuben Askew, Alan Cranston, John Glenn, Gary Hart, Ernest “Fritz” Hollings, Jesse Jackson, Walter Mondale and Ronald Reagan. The candidates were asked to submit to Baruch two answers to each question. One set of answers had a maximum limit of 200 words and the other set had a maximum limit of 700 words. Baruch forwarded the responses to the Houston advertising firm of Ogilvy and Mather, which is directing the advertising series for LTV.

During the 250-word responses are being published in The Wall Street Journal. Reagan’s campaign director is in the ads because he chose not to participate in the series until after the Democratic nomination, so he did not submit the 200-word response.

Also, the responses of the Democratic candidates that have dropped out of the Presidential race no longer appear in the ads.

After the Democratic convention, the 2,000-word responses of Reagan and the Democratic nominee will appear in the Journal. Also, a booklet will be published on these responses.

Reconstituted Charter

Dear Editor,

I would like to clear up a remark attributed to me which appeared in your last issue. Stated, "Students Paint Time as "Heroic Age." They say century was "grand and splendid."" I apologize for appearing to say that. "The time is now," I meant to say, "the money is there," and "the resources are available."

Sincerely,

In Defense of Islam

Dear Editor,

I'm writing in response to Professor Glenny Abrahams's column in the April 27 issue of The Ticker. While I agree with some of his points about the danger of fundamentalist thought, I disagree with his portrayal of Islam as a monolithic, extremist religion.

First, I would like to address the issue of the Council on American-Islamic Relations (CAIR). While CAIR has been criticized by some for its advocacy of civil rights, I believe it is important to recognize its role in promoting understanding between Muslims and non-Muslims.

Second, I would like to address the issue of the right to pray in schools. While I agree that students should be allowed to pray in schools, I believe that the establishment clause of the Constitution should be upheld.

Finally, I would like to address the issue of the proposed amendment to the Constitution. While I agree that the amendment would be a step in the right direction, I believe that the amendment should be considered carefully, and that the voices of all Americans should be heard.

Sincerely,
Lisa R. Rhodes

Blacklash: the Democrat's Hope

By Jesse Berger

During his first two years in office, Presi­dential adviser on civil rights and civil liberties, a dogged critic of government policy and practices, has been fighting to make the public aware of what he sees as an increasing threat to civil liberties.

"I've been trying to educate the public about the problems that have been faced by civil libertarians in recent years," he said. "I think it's important that people understand the full scope of what's going on, and that they know what to do about it."}

In his book "Blacklash: the Democrat's Hope," which will be published in the fall, Berger discusses the current state of civil liberties in the United States and the challenges facing the Democratic Party. He argues that the Democratic Party must take a strong stand against the erosion of civil liberties, and that it must work to ensure that the Constitution is protected for all Americans.

Berger's book is available for pre-order now, and will be available in bookstores nationwide on October 1. The book is 320 pages long and is priced at $25.00 in hardcover and $15.00 in paperback.

Jesse Berger is a former presidential advisor on civil rights and civil liberties, and a long-time advocate for civil liberties. He is the author of several books on civil liberties, including "The Constitution and the Bill of Rights: An Introduction to the United States Constitution." He is also a frequent speaker on civil liberties issues.

Conservatism Can Be Cured

By Enoch Long

Thanks to the latest advances in the fields of psychiatry, psychotherapy, and business administration, the field of conservative politics has been revolutionized. That's why I'm here today. First, let's define what conservatism is. Conservatism is a political philosophy that supports a large portion of the American population. This attitude has plagued most of the communist government was founded, highly critical institutions, and, usually, it is just as radical as the party and was really quite a shock if you're not familiar with the political scene.

Many of you are familiar with the term "conservative," but what does it mean? In its most general sense, the word "conservative" means someone who opposes change. This is often interpreted as a person who is opposed to new ideas or innovations. However, conservatism can also refer to the political philosophy associated with the conservative movement in the United States. This philosophy emphasizes the importance of tradition, law, and order, and opposes change in the form of new ideas or innovations.

The conservatism philosophy is often associated with the Republican Party, which was founded in the 1850s as a party of free labor and individualism. The party was founded by Abraham Lincoln, who believed in the principles of states' rights, limited government, and individual freedom. The party grew in popularity during the Civil War, and it played a key role in the Reconstruction era, which saw the end of slavery and the establishment of the 15th Amendment.

Men's Lockers Robbed
By Felicia Raphael

On March 1, 1984, Haynes
McIntyre, director of security at Baruch College, noted violence breaking in the sixth floor of the University's main building. A device had been placed in the main door to the building. The device began working at 3:15 p.m. The inhabitants of the sixth floor were not able to return home because the door could not be opened.

The incident, which took place on February 26, 1984, was reported to Security/Office by the building's caretaker.

The building is open from 7:00 a.m. to 9:00 p.m. on weekdays and 10:00 a.m. to 9:00 p.m. on weekends.

The building's caretaker,
Mr. Alfredo Sotomayor, notified immediately Harry McIntyre, director of security, said. "We made a report, contacted the police. The police arrived; we tested the door.

The police found that the alcohol in the door was still active and that the door had not been opened.

The building's caretaker,
Mr. Alfredo Sotomayor,
contacted the 13th Precinct, said. "We contacted the 13th Precinct, and sent the roommates of the lockers to the building. They were there from 10:00 a.m. to 12:00 p.m. But they could not open the locks of the lockers.

It was decided to notify the police, and the police arrived.

Barbara Bauer

O'Marie Clasing: PHIILIPPINES

Barbara Bauer was born in Iowa in 1964 and graduated from the University of Iowa in 1986 with a B.A. in International Business Administration. Since then, she has worked in the international business field for various companies, but she currently works for a company that specializes in international trade and logistics. She is fluent in English, Spanish, and French, and she has traveled extensively, which has given her a deep understanding of international business practices.

In her current role, Barbara is responsible for managing international trade operations, negotiating contracts, and developing strategies to enhance the company's global presence. She works closely with clients from different countries, ensuring that all transactions are handled efficiently and effectively.

Barbara's expertise in international business is derived from her academic background and her extensive experience in the field. She has a strong understanding of cultural differences and the importance of building strong relationships with partners across the globe.

In her free time, Barbara enjoys reading, traveling, and exploring new cultures. She is an avid reader and particularly enjoys books that provide insights into different societies and ways of life. Traveling is another passion of hers, and she has been to many countries, always eager to learn more about the world and its inhabitants.

Barbara's commitment to her work and her love for learning make her an asset to her company and to the international business community as a whole.
Tickr: How do you decide how much money the Finance Committee should allocate to each club? Daniel Oliver: (B) A primary concern in allocating funds is to make sure that all clubs have sufficient resources to function effectively. This means providing a fair amount of money to each club so they can operate smoothly. However, clubs should provide a functional budget that shows how they plan to spend their funds. This ensures that all funds are used efficiently and effectively and that the club's goals are met. Additionally, the Finance Committee should provide a functional budget for all clubs, ensuring that all funds are used efficiently and effectively and that the club's goals are met. The Finance Committee should also consider the club's financial history and the club's potential to use funds effectively and efficiently when deciding how much money to allocate to each club. Finally, the Finance Committee should consider the club's financial needs and the club's potential to use funds effectively and efficiently when deciding how much money to allocate to each club. Women Writers: Creative Choices

By Sally Kotten

"I started writing when I was seventeen. I wrote nothing throughout the next twenty years. I was married, and my husband, a successful writer, said to me that if I wanted to write, I should get to work on it. So I began to think about writing, hoping that I might have a vocation as a writer."

The upcoming issue of doubleL and brown, whose editorial staff consists of students from Professor Roslyn Bernstein's Business and Sense class, will concentrate on the changing world of publishing.
The issue, which will be published twice a year, is the result of a semester-long project that students in Bernstein's class have worked on. The project, which began in the fall, has been completed and will be published in the spring.

Bernstein, who teaches the Business and Sense class, said that the project was designed to give students an opportunity to learn about the publishing industry and to gain practical experience in the field.

"I think it's important for students to understand that publishing is not just about writing," she said. "It's about managing a publication and selling it.
"The project has been very demanding, but I believe it has been a valuable experience for the students."

Bernstein, who is also a free-lance graphic designer and writer, said that she has been involved in the publishing industry for many years.

"I've been involved in publishing for a long time," she said. "I've worked with a number of publishers, and I've been involved in the production of many different publications."

 anomaly, for housing the Hayd Gallery, located at 8 East 22nd Street, is a reminder of the need for art in the city. The 23-year-old Bryant Gallery, a small but lively space, is the ideal setting for a young artist. Here, in the 1970s, President Lyndon B. Johnson was photographed for Time magazine. The Hayd Gallery was founded in 1970 by one of the first African American art dealers, Henry Hayd. Today, the gallery continues to be a vibrant hub for emerging artists.

The Hayd Gallery is the perfect place to hang out and enjoy a slice of New York City life. The gallery is open daily from 11 am to 6 pm, and admission is free.

The Corner Gallery

By Lyn Korn

Barrakhs, the Corner Gallery, located at 23rd Street and 5th Avenue, is a small but charming space that offers a variety of exhibits and events throughout the year. The gallery was founded in 1980 by artists Elizabeth and Robert Barakat, who wanted to create a place to showcase emerging artists and foster community engagement.

The gallery is open daily from 11 am to 6 pm, and admission is free. Visitors can also enjoy a coffee bar and bookshop on the premises.

The NABA's Activities

By Arthur Keating

The National Association of Black Accountants (NABA) is a professional organization dedicated to the advancement of black accountants. The organization was founded in 1970 by Dr. John W. McCall, Sr., to provide an opportunity for black accountants to network, share knowledge, and promote the profession.

Today, NABA has over 20,000 members worldwide and offers numerous programs and events to support its members. The organization also provides scholarships and awards to help students pursue their education in accounting.

The NABA's activities include hosting conferences, workshops, and networking events. Additionally, the organization publishes a quarterly newsletter and maintains a website for members to connect and share information.

Golden Girl

"The Olympic Commitment: A Personal Story" is how Wendy Boglioli summaries the hard work and mental preparation she endured in her quest for Olympic gold. Moreover, Wendy is a three-time Olympic gold medalist, making her, at the age of 26, the youngest woman ever to win a swimming medal. From her sister Laurie, who is also a competitive swimmer, to her young daughter, who is also developing her skill, the Boglioli family is filled with swimmers.

In 1984, Wendy was the first woman to ever win a swimming medal at the 1976 Montreal Summer Olympic Games. This qualify her as a professional swimmer, according to the Olympic Committee's rules, any swimmer who carries money through their sport is considered a professional and, therefore, not eligible to compete in the Olympic Games. "The biggest lesson of the Olympic Games is that sports are not equal," she said. "Half are amateurs and the other half are professionals."

While growing up, winning was the primary goal for Wendy. As a child, she trained for hours a day, Wendy feels that her parents' coaching gave her an edge over those whose coaches were not family members. Besides, Wendy could not face her training at the pool — it followed her home and if she had to do anything but swim, she would have to do it not only from her parents, but from siblings as well.

Finally at age 21, after 15 years of rigorous training, Wendy's dedication paid off. During the 1976 Montreal, the American women's freestyle relay team broke the world record in the 4x100-meter relay. Wendy is 27 and currently holds the world's record in the 25-meter butterfly after she swam 2.25.

"I wanted to be an Olympic swimmer," she said. "I wanted to win medals. And when I made the Olympic team, it encouraged me to keep going."

Wendy wanted to try out for this year's Olympic Swim Team but was turned down because she had to train 25 hours a week for at least an hour and a half daily. Now, at age 26, after having a baby, working, and going to college, that is what she wants. She feels stronger, more confident, and more secure than she ever has in the past.

"Wendy, I've been looking for..."
Kate embarks on a journey to find some peace and quiet in Idaho, but finds herself in a busy, overwhelming metropolis. Her quest is to escape the social and cultural manners where she serves as a social worker grinding away at the basic level, trying to keep her mankind on her mind. She is desperate to find the balance between her personal life and her professional duties. Kate is inclined to be a self-sacrificing person, but she feels that the demands of her job are overwhelming her. She feels that she is losing her identity as a woman and a human being.

Kate's journey takes her to New York City, where she spends time with her friend, a sophisticated woman who lives in the heart of the city. Kate is shocked by the glittering world of high-society and the shallow mannerisms of the people she encounters. She feels out of place and out of her element, but she is determined to find the answer to her questions.

Kate's search leads her to a mysterious man, who offers to help her. He is a wise and enigmatic figure, who seems to have a deep understanding of the world. He teaches Kate that in order to find peace, she must let go of her preconceived notions and open her mind to new possibilities. Kate learns that the key to her personal happiness lies in embracing the unknown and the unpredictable.

Kate's journey is a personal one, but it is also a search for the meaning of life. She learns that in order to find true happiness, she must let go of her fears and embrace the realities of the world. Kate's journey is a testament to the power of the human spirit, and the ability of one person to change the world.
Archers Take Aim

By Orest Mandy

With the 1983-84 archery season coming to an end, Baruch's Statesmen have just about clinched third place in the Metro Collegiate Conference. Their competitors in this conference are: Barnard/Columbia, Lehman, Stevens Tech. and Queensborough Community College.

According to Professor Helen Belden, "We have competed as a team for just a year, but we've competed as a club for two years."

Having high expectations for the archery squad, Belden said, "Next semester we should move up to at least second place." The optimistic attitude is evidenced by the fact that all of the shooters are improving with each shot.

This season saw the Statesmen take an impressive second place finish in the annual Nassau Bowmen's Invitational. In February, the Statesmen placed third in the New York State College Archery Championship Shoot. The results of the event have not been compiled as of the date of this publication, although Belden said, "We finished in third or fourth; it's really too hard to tell. We had all-time high scores from our shooters." All the colleges in New York with archery squads competed at this event. The next big event for the Statesmen was the Atlantic City Classic held on the weekend of April 13th. "This," according to Professor Belden, "is a real tough one (tournament). It's the biggest tournament in the East, and it's the last event of our season."

In a usual league shoot, archers are required to shoot 30 arrows at a 40 centimeter target face from a distance of 18 meters. The bull's eye, or "gold", is approximately two inches in diameter. Special tournament have their own requirements.

Although archery is not a very physically demanding sport, it requires intense concentration. In order to prepare shooters for this sport, Belden has devised a combination of physical exercises: arm-lifts, weight-lifting, and push-ups, along with scientific relaxation. In scientific relaxation, the person assumes the corpse position and concentrates on perceiving relaxation as opposed to tension. According to Belden, "These exercises have helped an awful lot. Archery is a sport that is 90% mental."

Citing the fact that the Statesmen archers are primarily lower classmen, Belden said, "We show very much promise. Next year is going to be a real good year for us. We'll be a real challenge to our competitors, since most of them depend on their seniors for success."

Although antiquated equipment has plagued the archers for some time, Belden noted, "Many shooters are gradually getting closer and closer to perfection." With the new equipment due very shortly, Belden added, "It will further contribute to our success. When it arrives, hopefully we will improve."

Working with a relatively small squad of only 11 shooters, of whom about three-quarters never had any prior archery experience, Belden said "We've got a team that's dedicated, self-control habits and good attitudes."

Since archery is primarily a psychological sport, these attributes, according to Belden, can only contribute to their success.

 Trials of the Tennis Team

By Orest Mandy

On the morning of April 6th, the Baruch College Tennis team had lost only one individual match and had a team record of 1 win and 0 losses. By the evening of that same day, the Statesmen had a record of 1 win and 1 loss. This time they had played four hours of intense tennis, but lost to a very capable John Jay squad. The match was held outdoors at 114th Street and Third Avenue in the 69th Armory on 25th Street.

Tennis matches are scored on the basis of individual matches won. Six singles matches and three doubles matches comprise one team match. One point is awarded for every match won. The Statesmen lost to John Jay by a score of 3-0.

Baruch's first win came against Lehman, of which coach Matt Holaday said, "If they're any indication of the other teams we will be playing, we'll do very well." The Statesmen almost swept Lehman, beating them eight matches to one. According to Holaday, "We look really good, we have a very spirited team. However, the Statesmen have had a lot of problems related to practice time. They practice at the 69th Armory on 25th Street four times a week, but because of class conflicts, most players only practice twice a week.

The lack of practice was not to blame in Baruch's first loss, the players all had very close matches as their scores show. Dan Palmer, of the Statesmen said, "Ours are courts are much faster," referring to the courts at the armory. "Here, you have bumps, puddles, and cracks on the courts making it very difficult to play." He added, "I think at our courts we could sweep them."

The fact that Baruch usually trains indoors and John Jay outdoor doors had a bearing on the outcome of this team match. The sun shone sharply on the clay courts, and a wind, according to team captain David Silverstein, "was definitely a factor."

After all six singles matches had been completed, Baruch and John Jay were tied at three points apiece. Three doubles matches were to determine the outcome. The Statesmen defeated one doubles team beat John Jay's best. After this match was over, all the Statesmen had to do was win one doubles match.

They then lost their next doubles match by a fairly large margin (3-6, 6-2). All eyes then turned to the tie-breaking match, that of Kurt Wilner/Joy Gohil (Baruch) vs. Brown/Ramsay (John Jay). The match sawed from the beginning to the end. Wilner/Gohil, losing by a score of four games to one, made a few strong volleyes to tie at 4-4, but their strong drive was not enough. John Jay's team emerged victorious. Scott Klein, of the Statesmen, said, "This is the first time I've played outdoors since last summer. With a little more outdoor practice we should do real well."

Yankees: 1984 Style

By Mike Lashinsky

Coming into the 1984 season, the Yankees continue to employ two managers. The official manager is Yogi Berra while the actual manager is owner George Steinbrenner. If Steinbrenner continues to manage the team (which is most likely to happen) the Yankees will continue to falter. Here is an analysis of the Yankees and their chances for the season.

It is indeed true that the Yankees have many quality players. The problem is they have too many quality players. This is evident in the infield where only Willie Randolph at third base is certain. The other positions are still up for grabs. It picks for the Yankees are Ken Griffey, Roy Smalley, and Don Mattingly, who will all see action. At short, they will use Andre Robertson, Tim Foli, and Roy Smalley. At third base is Roy Smalley and Tony Harrah, as the captain, Graig Nettles, has been shipped to the Padres. As a result of all of this platooning, there will be an enormous amount of dissension. In considering the future, only Mattingly and Robertson are just beginning their careers. The rest of them have either passed their prime or have reached their prime. The infield is indeed not as deep as some other teams. The Tigers, Brewers, or Blue Jays.

At catcher, the Yankees have the pride of New Jersey, Rick Cerone. And portside swinger Butch Wynegar. The Yankees are platooning these two players who is a big mistake. Wynegar's defensive skills, especially his arm outclass Cerone's. In addition, Wynegar hits about 40 points higher than Cerone. Wynegar is indeed the better of the two.

The Yankees outfit is indeed a great example of how the Yankees are being mishandled. To put it mildly, the outfit is a mess. Placing Steve Kemp in left field is an awful move considering his porous defensive skills. Kemp can hit, but he won't win any Gold Gloves. Having Omar Moreno in centerfield is also a curious move. Moreno was acquired in the trade for Jerry Mumphrey. Mumphrey, who is a solid .300 hitter, is also just as good as Moreno defensively. Moreno bats .240, and although he has great speed, he strikes out a lot. The move of moving Wynegar to right field is placing Dave Winfield in right field. Winfield is mainly the Yankees' best outfielder, but one of the best in baseball. Winfield should play center.

When it comes to pitching, the Yankees have some good ones, but also are in a bind. Ron Guidry, the Yankees' ace, is back and should have another fine season. However, Dave Righetti, the author of the no-hitter last July 4th, in an amazingly ridiculous move, has been sent to the bullpen. As a result of losing Goose Gossage to the Padres, Rightnow is the late-inning fireman. This move is a big mistake and for the Yankees' sake, it will not continue for the fall season. The Yankees' other starters, Shane Rawley, Phil Niekro, and John Montefusco are decent. However, this staff does not measure up to the staffs of the world champion Orioles, or for that matter the Tigers, or the Blue Jays.

The Yankees do have a talented team, but they also have many problems. The team is unhappy with Steinbrenner and thus it will be difficult for them to concentrate amid all this dissonance. Unfortunately for Yankee fans, this will be a disappointing season as they will finish fourth behind Detroit, Baltimore, and Toronto.
