School Offers Free Legal Aid To Students

In continuing efforts to make college life a little more accommodating, the college is offering free legal services for Baruch students. In addition to housing and consumer affairs, students can now receive legal advice free of charge on immigration matters.

"Immigration is a very specific thing and not many lawyers specialize in it," says Sara Garibaldi USG president.

"I think it's a good idea," says accounting major Harvinder Tinna. "We have a lot of international students and it's better that they get their questions answered about their visa and school, in school than go somewhere else and pay consultation fees."

Chin King, a self-employed attorney, has been contracted by the school to advise students on housing, landlord and tenant issues as well as on consumer and family affairs. King is on campus once a week.

In Meeting of Minds, Student Representatives Share Ideas, Mix Pragmatism With Passions

The first CUNY Council of Presidents meeting of the year was held on March 2. A president or member of the University Student Senate for each CUNY school is supposed to attend COP meetings in order to represent their school with thoughts and information on different issues. And attend they did.

"You never get everybody, but you get at least half of them," said Mizonor Brown, chair of USG.

Among the topics discussed were the Amado Diaio verdict, the empowerment of immigrants, the lack of full-time faculty and child care.

Baruch's USS representative Edward Ellis was on hand, keeping with his creed of "getting people together." COP President Rafael Dominguez, from City College, was the main speaker for the event.

"Ironic, the organization's acronym, COP, provided an unintentional allusion to the first issue discussed - the Amado Diaio verdict," Dominguez.

"We do want to do something, but we're not out there," said Ellis.

Other representatives were a little more passionate about the verdict and what students should do to combat police brutality.

Morgan T. Healy, student government president of the predominantly white College of Staten Island, believes that an emotional slant would be more effective than a racial one in gaining students' attention and participation.

"One to two percent of my population cares," said Healy. At CSU, we needed to listen to the student voice.

Recognizing that there were two ways to deal with what has happened, he is set to lobby the legislature and the other, to organize groups.

"We don't want something for nothing, but we can't do it," said Ellis.

City to receive 49 teachers from CUNY

Last September, 49 men and women began new careers as math and science teachers in New York City's classrooms. It was a group as diverse as the city itself. Recent college graduates and career-changers reflected the spectrum of nationalities, racial and ethnic groups found in the city.

A year after, many of these people had no idea that they would be standing, chalk in hand, bringing order and information to a class of energetic high school students. These novice teachers had just completed the first part of the Teaching Opportunity Program, a joint venture of CUNY and the New York City School system. They were now energetic high school students.

TiVo was founded in 1999 by Tom Berman, a former Microsoft executive, and scribbled a letter to the Wall Street Journal saying he wanted to create a "personal video recorder" that would allow viewers to watch their favorite shows at their convenience. The company was eventually acquired by Intel Corporation in 2007.

TiVo has since become a household name, with nearly 5 million units sold by 2001. The company quickly expanded into the market for digital video recorders (DVRs), which are now standard in most American households. TiVo also began offering streaming services, which allow viewers to watch live TV shows online.

Eduators, Education, and The Lack Thereof

Problems. As students we have enough of them to worry about. Classes, grades, work, love. The last thing we need is a reform in the educational system. "An institution that relies excessively on adjunct faculty cannot offer, in regular sequence, the kind of education that students need," said Matthew Goldstein, chancellor of CUNY, who is processing more than $4.5 million to hire more full-time professors.

Adjuncts have long been a staple of the remediation-teaching method and a lack of sincerity. It's easy to pick on the little guys but the fact is adjuncts are good and some are bad, just like tenured professors. Actually, it is easier, at least, to get rid of a bad adjunct teacher than one who has the privilege of tenure.

It is also of note that most adjuncts, to make ends meet, must "chop college," that is, teach two classes here and another one somewhere else sometimes. That is class to classes a semester, at a total salary of often less than $20,000. Full-time professors get paid upwards of $50,000 for teaching around seven courses a semester, or less.

So we have a discrepancy in economics, and any macro or micro teacher can tell you that can cause a manifest imbalance in desired results.

But don't feel bad for the underpaid individual at the front of your next class, think this: CUNY has reportedly begun seeking bids for private companies to host the remediation classes they just axed.

High school and elementary public education lies at the root. Recently released reports state the NYC dropout rate for the class of 1999 increased to 17.5 percent. That's one in six students. The poor and poorest schools are getting worse and worse while the schools with a luxury of students.

Interscholal Teachers Harold Levy is a media darling and thorn in the side of Giuliani. As his level, he has attacked teachers as well, saying that there are not enough good ones, and the bad ones stick around too long. He was quoted in Newsday describing the results of the bad teachers: "The teacher who had a change of heart about the Elian Gonzales saga.\n

Baruch Archery Club Returns to Competition

By Kenyatta Pious

In the collegiate sports world, Baruch College’s archery program has been long bound and buried. However, as February 13th rolled around, the Baruch Archery Club put the college back on the map by participating in the Big Apple FITA Indoor Championship in Flushing, Queens. Inexperienced and overmatched the Baruch archers stood their ground, taking fourth place in their first collegiate competition in years. The Baruch archers had been coached to simply view this competition as just another practice, but it was clear from the opening shots that the Baruch archers were truly ready. The team had been relatively inactive in competition due to a shortage of funds and practice hours. The championship had been less than perfect. Due to a scheduling mix-up, the club had been forced to attend a practice session instead of the actual competition, which meant that the women’s basketball team experienced the same scheduling mix-up. The circumstances leading up to the FITA championship had been less than ideal. This time, the team lost perhaps its best veteran archer and the least experienced bar, Jessica Rubenstein. The Baruch archer and the least experienced bar, Tanya, was forced to deal with the pressure of being the only female archer on the team. The team struggled to find a rhythm and fell behind, earning them a berth in the NCAAs. never got the chance to retire. Mr. Minners would note that the women’s basketball season was less than perfect. International work is up to you imagination, but some believe they are unbelievably affluent and powerful.
Facing their influence is Lake McManus (Joshua Jackson), an intelligent cop who has worked hard to be in the Ivy League, but now realizes that there is no way that he can get anything without massive financial support. He begins to get a cryptic phone call instructing him to "keep an eye on the Skulls," that suggests that the group is the backbone of our society. The story is also seen through the eyes of Alva, a beautiful model, who is hiding from her past as a member of the group.

A film depicting the workings of a secret society would be dominated by its women. There are only five women in this film, and they are all underfed and overworked. I suppose that's what it's all about. There are also the two main secret societies, the Skulls and the Knights. The Skulls are evil and dangerous, and the Knights are just as bad. It's all just a game of power and control. The film is not perfect, but it's still an interesting watch.

Slipknot: A New Meaning to the Word Strange

By Dave

Welcome! I am Dave, obviously. Sorry if you’ve never smelled before what you are about to get into. The band Slipknot has gone down quite a few roads, and I’ve been asked to talk about the band’s newest album,农田

Lives are complicated. And yes, I understand. But what we can’t do is let that stand in the way of the music we enjoy. Slipknot, with this album, has created something truly unique and powerful. This album is a journey into the darkest parts of the human experience, and it is a powerful testament to the strength of the human spirit.

The album opens with a track called “1,2,3,” which immediately sets the tone for what is to come. The music is dark and heavy, and the vocals are raw and unapologetic. It’s a powerful introduction to the rest of the album.

The next track, “The Game,” is a hard-hitting rock song that features Slipknot’s signature sound—a mix of heavy guitar riffs, driving drums, and powerful vocals. This song is a perfect example of what Slipknot does best—rocking out and delivering a powerful message.

The album continues with tracks like “Villains,” “Duality,” and “Purity,” each of which brings a different perspective to the overall theme of the album. These songs are not just about rocking out, but they also deal with deeper issues like addiction, mental illness, and the struggle to find meaning in a chaotic world.

The album closes with a powerful track called “Duality,” which is the perfect总结 to the entire album. It brings together the themes of the album and delivers a profound message about the power of human connection.

In conclusion, Slipknot’s album is a powerful and thought-provoking journey into the human experience. It’s a testament to the band’s musical talent and their ability to create music that resonates with people on a deeply personal level.

Where’s My Kittie At?

Kittie, Spit (2000)

By Jeffrey Belsky

Kittie. Awe, so sweet and gentle.

Yeah, right. Morgan Lander (vocalist), Tami MinKL (guitarist), Emily Lazar (bassist), and Mercedes Lander (drums), have been running around the country making music for over a decade now. They started off as a garage band in Seattle, and have grown into a national phenomenon.

The band’s sound is a mix of hard rock and punk, with a lot of aggression and energy. Their live shows are intense, and they have a strong following of fans who love their music.

Their latest album, Spit (2000), is a collection of songs that are both powerful and personal. The album features a mix of songs about love, loss, and struggle, and it’s a great testament to the band’s musical talent.

So, if you’re looking for a band that is both powerful and personal, I would highly recommend Kittie. Their music is sure to move you and make you feel something. And if you’re lucky enough to see them live, their energy is contagious, and you’ll find yourself wanting more.

Do the words unloose, acid jazz, trip hop, drum'n'bass, techno bring thoughts of drugs to the forefront of your mind? Once a term used to describe music composed purely out of synthesizers and mechanically generated beats, it has evolved into a complicated yet harmonious blend of bass lines, and the latest dance music is now fully embraced by pop charts.

Ambient

Mystic, downtempo blend of soft jazz breakbeat, slow, smooth grooves and smoky sonatas where vocals are optional and soaking in the mood is essential. Velvety soundscapes with trancy synths, vocal chants and hypnotic strings. Orbital and Aphex Twin are at the forefront of today's lounge music.

Acid Jazz

This percussive heavy dance music is best represented by Groove Collective with live horns, guitars, and other R&B vibes, a warm blend of acid jazz and drum n bass.

Techno

Founded in the 80s, this is the father of electronic music. It all began when Detroit DJs spun their records at speed racer levels, and with only slight modifications since then it's still alive and kicking.

Drum 'n' Bass

Freely known as jungle, this is best characterized by its strong bass line and double or quadruple time beats. Caveman, Vc Crew, Hackney, and Bryan G have helped lead the sound. It features less bass, steady beats and transcendental vibes.

Trance

This fastest rising break through in electronic music, artists such as Sasha and Paul Oakenfold have helped lead the sound. It features less bass, steady beats and transcendental vibes.

Dave Ralph

Transport II

Kinetik Records

This dynamic duo of CDs is on the top of my list for best trance mix ever! Dave Ralph, who has done everything from producing, djing, running, and managing record labels, has managed to stay on trend. His 18 arms own their two CDs entitled Arrivals and Departures. The progressive music provides fly meets fast and sends you into another world. The frantic 110 beats per minute music is explosive, with the lack of obvious beats keeping you connected with the music. This is must have completion.

Sasha

Xynder EP

Ultra Records

One of the original progressive trance artists, I can only describe his work as MAS- SIVE. Sasha has helped to spread the sound in the States with Florida based DJ Khaled Collins, his record store moves from one club to another. In his recent Dubstep.explosion, divaLOOR CD has fairly generic funky beats, dads,正面 while he was returning from a diving trip in Simon and Garfunkel's album, Sasha is already becoming a fast favorite with many DJs and I promise you'll love it too.

Check him out five at Twilo, his inspiration for Ashwood, where he spins on a

Paul Van Dyk

Another Way/Avenue

Danilo

Paul Van Dyk started 1999 with a big hit - his now remix of Human's Love. Revivalism. He finished it with long-awaited new material in the form of the double-album "Another Way/ Avenue", which turned out to be his third successful UK Top 40 hit. The best mixes out of two teams, this is a single with six varying themes on another Way and Avenue. From the first song he hits you with an array of beats that texture and inspire the beat to blend double time. His tracks are truly seminal.

Paul will be spinning at Twilo on March 24th.

Danny Tenaglia

Back to Mine

Ultra Records

Brooklyn-born House DJ remains a top player after three albums - Back To Mine - in 1994. Now it's your turn to enjoy his music when you're back in the States this summer. He's been working with a variety of sounds, including are a group of old-school classics like Love Yourself, King on Walkin' - Kelly's Baby. The entire collection was amazing, but definitely not one you'd expect from Danny.

Danny had every single party goer dancing by the end of the track in the Vinyl, the sleepless free club. At his final jungle session he was in the first floor, but left us hanging with a few super long vocals before the Selah Jones, and the best ones that didn't stop for nothing. I had one of my better sets, soaking up my tank top with the Danny villas that just provided me with tonight's

The lounge, drum'n'bass, techno progression can not be denied. It has finally swelled to explosion status in this States after rocking people overseas for years. If you still haven't caught on and aren't sure what's good and what's not, here are a few artists that you need to listen to:

Breakfast Era

Ultra-choose

Interscope/Geffen/AA&M Records

Drum 'n' bass with vocals. Breakfast Era is a Dw Dj and Snow of Space clap cove, whose work has made them the most sought after acts of the moment. The percussion is simple but the beats are steady due to the sharp and percussive bass line.进食 club kids off the vinyl and we're in the mood for something different.

The sounds are fast and unpredictable with sounds DCDC going to minutes. The music is built around dissonance and structure. The results is a track that repeat and build while pushing the envelope. Without a doubt, this growingly bandage edge to drum 'n' bass is leading to revolution in the genre and taking it to a whole new level.

For the rougher and tougher, this album is heavy on the hard side and light on the variety. Produced on Freestyler aka the double Club, Paraplane 2000 and digestion, it's not clear how many times you'll need to work before you finally know if your music sounds right. This album is not for the casual producer but there's something about this track that will make you want to repeat and push it to its limits.

The musician has taken many tracks and used them to push his own style. This album would have made this album much more interesting. Label itself is a mix of very strong songs that don't need. It mixes it up once towards the end of the album is a track that is different from the rest. This is one of the best albums that I have heard.
Awaken To Your Past

Do you believe in reincarnation? In a past life, could you have been a warrior? What if your current friends, your enemies long ago, were your past enemies? Would you like to know? Why, maybe you can. All you have to do is wake up.

Five hundred years ago, a bloody civil war broke out in the Inca Empire. Lion-O, the chosen one, was destined to lead the Thundercats.

Jaga, and his pet, Snarl, left their home planet before it exploded. In cryogenic sleep, Jaga has died and Lion-O is the chosen one to lead the Third Earth. Lion-O goes from being a boy with huge muscles to a warrior.

Thundercats was a show about the feline warriors from the Thundercats. The show ran from 1985, until early 1990, including a part of Dragon Ball Z, Sailor Moon, and the original Thundercats.

In a storyline written by the show's creators, the Thundercats are still with us, even if it is in a different form. The show's creators have stated that they would do anything to protect themselves from outsiders. Miura is about to graduate with a music major and wants to be a professional musician.

A peek into the soul of Baruch

The face of Copper

Eyes as wide as the sea

You've got a smile that will start your own religion

And I thought I'd have to choose between

As familiar as the taste of copper in my mouth

You've got a soul that's made of steel

And a God for angels are made of steel

And copper is the best conductor for a country of dears flame

How another tiny fist vanishes

She is also one whose wisdom, in a theory

Informed about this guidance

But misunderstood as the cheapest currency

And with her went and with her wisdom she will govern

Undermining the greed of the gullibly

Traveling up to your chalice into a gull-six star

Where you think for your money as you ascend the heavens

Don't Take My Advice

You know I need a simple answer to one of the questions that haunt me. What is the difference between right and wrong? Is it just a matter of opinion? How can you know for sure that something is right or wrong? Is it just a matter of personal preference?

The answer to these questions is not simple. It is a complex matter that requires deep thought and careful consideration. Right and wrong are not always clear-cut, and there can be many shades of gray between them. It is important to be mindful of the impact of our actions on others and to strive to do what is just and fair.

In conclusion, the difference between right and wrong is not always easy to determine. It requires careful thought and consideration, and there can be many shades of gray between them. It is important to be mindful of the impact of our actions on others and to strive to do what is just and fair.
