Ringing Cell Phones Cause Hang-Ups In Classrooms
By Andrea Pich推 Contributing Writer

Cell phone phones are an important issue at Baruch. They seem to be a disturbance in the classrooms and library. A majority of students and faculties complain about the effects of cellphone ringing and disturbing the classroom. Others do not see cell phones as a major problem although sometimes they feel the consequence of intervention.

For some people, cell phones have become something indispensable; they depend on them on a normal basis. Nicole Chang, a junior majoring in Marketing, considers her cell phone one of the accessories she can not imagine leaving her house without.

"I got too used to my cell phone," said Chang. "I am practically hooked on it." When it comes to cell phones in the classrooms, however, there are some students who admit that they disrupt their concentration when they go off during class.

"Well, I don’t mind them and I don’t think the school should have a say if we are allowed to have them or not," said Lex, a finance major. "But I think that students should turn them off during class, that would show respect to their classmates.”

Although some students may tolerate the ringing of cell phones in the classrooms, others feel that they should not even be allowed in the classrooms or in the library.

"They should be banned from the library," said Andre Hincksen, an accounting major. Teachers believe that cell phones may be useful and to some extent may be a necessity but they should not even be allowed.

"Cell phones are important to have but at least put them on mute," said Antoniena D’Arnelio, professor of Italian. "It's an interesting way of typing thought process and good for learning."

"Let me get some of these in here," said Jennifer Billes, the physician’s assistant. Although the staff members felt that they are capable of taking care of the students’ needs and of providing top-quality facility, they encourage:

"We would like input from the students."

Although the opening of the Center was not publicized a small number of students wished to find out what was going on and walked into the offices. When necessary, around campus, does not know that Baruch has just received a health care facility for the first time in its history. "The idea is to have an office on student’s campus."

The Center is located inside the 360 Park Avenue building on the 20th floor suite entrance, a plaque on the side of the wall directs students to the healthcare center, which is located in the northwest corner of the lobby. The facility has the look and feel of a small clinic. Whereoccasions do the right and a small waiting area at the left is to the fixture guide and name fee. The exam room is next door to that. The waiting room is decorated with photos and pictures and has the hospital environment.

"Baruch managed to create a nice environment on the first floor," said Carlens. "The facilities have taken on a nice feel." Carlens praised David Kaufman.

Time Capsule Awaits Student Ideas

2000 will be etched into the structure of the campus in commemoration of Baruch College’s Furman building of its own. A plaque identical to a hundred-year-old one will mark the location of the capsule.

This plaque will be available for those administrators or engineers responsible for digging up and breaking open the capsule 100 years from now. Nobody knows at least not yet. Because the existence of the capsule, the significance of the article, and the fact that the capsule will actually remain will be decided, thereby leaving plenty of room for student input.

"With all of ideas and suggestions, a theme will emerge," says Joe Conte. Baruch's director of community relations.

"It is a lot of ideas and suggestions, a theme will emerge," says Joe Conte. Baruch's director of community relations.

The idea for the capsule originated from Joseph President’s Sidney Lubin’s office earlier this year, according to Conte. From there, the idea was passed to the Community Relations office, the academic deans, and the president. Finally, the concept was reviewed by the community and the American Association of Medical Colleges. The capsule is a metal box, approximately eight inches long, which spectacularly reflects the future. Endowed in the bands of a combination of materials, it is a symbol of enlightened thinking and innovation and deyard—which should be placed outside the capsule itself to prove a humanistic reality.

With a number of recent time capsule projects being reported in being transplanted, and with a number of experts’ ideas about what to put inside the capsule floating around the 22nd Street administrative building, ranging from Baruch’s Zona to the place of the building’s opening, the capsule has become the subject of much discussion. The capsule is an attempt to generate interest around campus, to generate interest for the students, and the Baruch general public.

The school is offering a special certificate to the person who submits the best idea, or idea, of the committee. In addition to the capsule, there are suggestions for the arts that would be of interest to the people of the 22nd century.

Students are encouraged to email their suggestions for what to put inside of the capsule.

"I was quite happy to see the students were interested," said Professor Conte.

Baruch's policy of requiring students to bring their own paper in order to print anything out at a computer lab or who don't know anyone who works for a Baruch office, are forced to deal with the consequen-tes of a cost-cutting measure. Instead, the average, not-so-well-connected Baruch student is being forced to tighten his or her belt and stretch for paper while the rest of the school enjoys the resilient paper supply. Unlimited and free paper access for students, faculty and administrators may indeed invite wastage and inefficiency in terms of both paper and precious human resources. The cost of providing the university's primary supply of paper is only becoming exorbitant, then the resulting austerity measures should at least be shared by administrations, faculty and students alike.

However, all do agree that natural laws of cell phone operation are almost like an invisible hand to regulate the cellular environment. Students are quick to shut their phones off at class times and in libraries. But have cell phones become a bane or balm in their lives? In DeSena's case, I was wrong. Time and time again, Giuliani has overlooked the central theme of the public's outcry by a long shot. You see, all is not a conglomeration of words, it is a word. How do you see it? Yes, before I go on to say these words...

Re: Giuliani Bashing — Keep it up

Mr. DeSena,

Let me start by praising you for bringing up some public policy questions, as demonstrated in ‘The Ticker’ article on April 17. I have never come across such a reasoned debate. But that’s not the only issue that brings me to this forum by a long shot. Many, including myself, are appalled with the manner in which the administration is performing on a day-to-day basis with the community. All he does is adamant—there is absolutely no room for debate. Then, not allowing any room for discussion is a form of societal influence. That’s not a form of leadership, a form of major opposition.

We do need to “join the fray as an opposition leader”, as Mr. DeSena aptly stated, in his view is correct. I am not sure if he was writing about the change that Mayor Giuliani should not be held accountable for the ‘big picture’—of enforcing paper policies or changing the current course of student-printing policies. That was my view, “join the fray as an opposition leader”.

Taking Giuliano Bashing — To New Level:

Sticks and Stones

It is quite clear that the expressions of thought and opinions have become a standard practice in society. However, one has seen a trend where the level of discussion and reasoning has decreased. This is due to the lack of critical thinking and a general apathy towards engaging in meaningful conversation.

Cultural Nuisances or Modern Needs?

Cell phones are everywhere. On the street, in buses and bars, the phones are all the rage. A modern combination of style and function, they seem perfectly adapted to the ever-changing modern world. However, the use of cell phones is not at all without its consequences. In the classroom, the constant beeping and ringing can become a distraction. In the workplace, the constant need to check messages can be a hindrance. But have cell phones become a bane or balm in their lives? In DeSena’s case, I was wrong. Time and time again, Giuliani has overlooked the central theme of the public’s outcry by a long shot. You see, all is not a conglomeration of words, it is a word. How do you see it? A FUTURE IN JEOPARDY

Softball Team to Fold Unless Lagging Attendance Picks Up

By Kenyatta Pius
Sports Editor

The women's softball team has hit some hard times. As of press time, the team may not be playing anymore. Sadly, the team has been riddled with inconsistency.

The worst part is that it is not inconsistency in the form of play, rather it is in the form of girls not showing up for games. The team has had to forfeit a number of games because there were seven girls and nine were needed to at least start the game. The players have more than enough players on its roster, yet the players are not committing to the team. Most players have a hard time committing due to classes and work. Most of you know that I constantly harp on how difficult it is to play sports at Baruch because of the so many demands placed on students. I commend all those who are student-athletes for going through these rigors. While sports are extracurricular activities and should never precede classes, it is sad to see players say they need more time and then neglect the activity. I think students always know before hand how much time they require for extracurricular activities and an extracurricular activity. That said, it is unfair to the team for students to decide to be a part of the team for a limited amount of time or in sparing roles.

My gut feeling tells me that some players at Baruch join clubs and teams just to have something to put on their resumes.

I hope that the women’s softball team gets over this problem especially since there has been such a demand for the team. For game information, contact Ralph Siranni at (212) 387-1274.

This Just In...

Jon Minners’ Commentary Corner

Hey yo! Jon Minners, the world’s hardest worker, comes back at you with another Commentary Corner. Not only do I do this, but I have the Asylum to worry about, friends, a girlfriend, freelance job, work, friends and a girlfriend. I am also a legend in my spare time. How much more can I take? I feel like I am going to snap.

Well, the time to snap has come. When I first started this column, I was asked to write some sports. I lift weights a lot, I play basketball all the time. How much more can I take?

At press time, the team is headed one to play New York Maritimes. Sadly, the baseball team may not have these on people due to injury or class. The softball team also have to make up two games that were not played last week because of rain. The better will be announced.

The next girls’ games are both doubleheaders. Wednesday, they will play SBC and Saturday against the College of Staten Island. The CSI game is especially big, so I hope they win. The next softball game is against SBC on this past Saturday with any game-related quotes at (212) 387-1274.

BASKETBALL

The Hockey playoffs have started and no one really cares. I will be looking at the scores right next to the fishing column. Let's go, who is the best team in the world, so chances of a playoff game are slim to none. The Knicks should put bags on their head when walking in public. All the hype and nothing to show for it.

The Mets are struggling this year, and hope they don’t last for long. They say it was the jet lag that got them in. I wonder how long jet lag lasts.

Well, what is going on that isn’t so bad? Well, the Cardinals are packing some power this year and McGwire may not be the only one who will be lighting them up. For the first time in years, the Cards have home run power and are winning games to boot. I wonder how long it will last.

The Knicks beat the Pacers in a wild game and are now proclaiming themselves as the team to beat in the East. Unfortunately, the Knicks are the team everyone can beat in the west, so chances of a playoff game are slim to none. The Knicks should put bags on their head when walking in public.
