Alumni Case
Reinstated by Court of Appeals

By KENNETH BROWN

The United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit reinstated the constitutional challenge by the Ad-Hoc Committee of Baruch Black and Hispanic Alumni against Baruch College.

Baruch refers to the black and Hispanic alumni group the use of the Baruch College name because, according to President Joel Segall, there is already an existing Baruch Alumni Association designed for all alumni regardless of race. The December 21, 1987 decision forces Baruch College to go to trial over this case.

But, according to Joseph Sellman, chairman of the Ad-Hoc Committee, in a 1984 interview, “Minority graduates may no alternative but to organize in the face of the consistent pattern of neglect by the Baruch Alumni Association with respect to black and Hispanic issues and interests.”

Preliminary Ruling
In December of 1986 a district court granted Baruch’s motion to dismiss the case. The court held that “no constitutional rights were implicated in the present case” to the group. The Court of Appeals overturned this decision and said that the College must come forward with justification for its actions. The opinion written by Judge Thomas Meskill said, “We conclude that under this standard, the district court dismissed the plaintiff’s (Ad-Hoc Committee) complaint prematurely.” The judge pointed out that it may be possible for the plaintiffs to prove that Baruch’s denial of official recognition might be based on discrimination. But, further proceedings would be needed to determine that. This case is expected to trial in 1988 but Segall could not reach.

Computer Registration
Ran Smoothly, Registrar and Students Agree

A Total of 16,245 Students Processed

By CATLIN MOLLISON

The registrar’s office with the help of the new computerized Baruch On-Line Student System (BosS), processed a total of 16,245 students for the Spring 1988 semester. This figure represents an increase of 228 over the Spring 1987 registration, and 800 the previous year.

Registrar Thomas McCarthy said, “Sixty-five percent of the students got a complete schedule this spring.” Last spring, 68 percent of the students received a complete schedule and McCarthy attributed this to “A large population,” and the fact that 8,245 students took advantage of early registration, as compared to 7,600 a year ago. Although this represents a dramatic increase, six percent of the students eligible to participate in early registration chose not to.

McCarthy stated these students said, “I wasn’t ready. I wasn’t sure I wanted to. I forgot. These are the kinds of reasons people gave me who went in (to register) on January 28.”

Although BosS was underway for the first time this semester, registration was not without its share of problems. The computer system broke down about six times during the three-week registration period. McCarthy said, “When the system gets hung up on a particular student it takes five minutes to regenerate if the printer is jammed.” He pointed out that these delays never lasted more than 10 minutes and registration cards were still accepted during the interim period.

Another problem which has been a traditional one at registration throughout the years is that of closed course sections. Said McCarthy, “As the days dwindled down to the end less people got what they wanted.”

Students asked why there are not enough classes to meet the needs of the students. McCarthy said, “This is not always the case, the problem is not always what everybody wants.

“Web end up in the school of business teaching classes that are quite large. Some people take longer voluntarily and do things out of order, they want everything and the sections are spread out to them.”

About the Survey
The Ticker conducted an informal survey of 172 students during the week of February 8-12. Conducted in the Student Center and the lobby of the 23rd Street Building, students were asked about their degree status, year in college and which registration period they participated in. The questionnaire also asked for their opinions about the course sections offered and about computer registration itself.

Our survey does not purport to be scientifically conducted or a statistically correct random sample. Instead, we believe it will provide a significant number of students on their opinions.

DSSG Gives Funds To Unchartered Club

$1,000 Mistake Raises Questions About Charter Process

By JOHN D. FRANK

The Day Session Student Government appropriated $1,000 to Brain Trust under the mistaken notion that the club was properly chartered. The money was given to President John Richards and DSSG records. The former president of the RSSG, Michael Robinson, Brain Trust failed to follow necessary procedures to form a club as outlined in the Student Organization Handbook. The RSSG also violated several of the guidelines set forth in The Ticker. Baruch Board of Trustees is the only way to form a club as outlined in the Student Organization Handbook.

Paying the way toward a Silent Spring

BY YOLAND COOKE

There was once a town in the heart of America. It was a small, idyllic place where the inhabitants were surrounded by nature and the beauty of the countryside. However, this town was not immune to the effects of the industrial revolution, and its citizens began to notice a change in the air and the water. The once crystal-clear streams were now murky and stinking, and the air was filled with a strange, pungent odor.

This town was the location of a chemical factory that produced a new type of pesticide called DDT. The factory, owned by a large corporation, had been operating for several years and was considered to be a major player in the industry. However, the town's residents were not aware of the true consequences of their chemical production.

As the years went by, the inhabitants of this town began to suffer from a new and mysterious ailment. Cases of cancer, birth defects, and nervous disorders were reported, and the community was left to wonder what could be causing this alarming increase in illnesses.

It was not until a young scientist named Rachel Carson began to investigate the use of DDT and other pesticides that the truth began to emerge. Carson's reporting, in her book "Silent Spring," revealed the devastating effects of these chemicals on the environment and the health of human beings.

The world took notice, and the use of DDT and other pesticides was greatly reduced. However, the damage had been done, and the inhabitants of this town were forced to come to terms with the consequences of their chemical production.

In the end, the story of this town serves as a reminder of the importance of considering the long-term impacts of our actions on the environment and our own health. It is a powerful testament to the need for responsible stewardship of the natural world.
THE NCR $300,000 STAKEHOLDER ESSAY COMPETITION FOR STUDENTS

The Mission

The Challenge

The Rules

To Create Value
At NCR, we've found that in order to create value, we must first satisfy the legitimate expectations of every person with a stake in our company. We call these people our stakeholders, and we attempt to satisfy their expectations by promoting partnerships in which everyone is a winner.

• We believe in building mutually beneficial and enduring relationships with all of our stakeholders, based on the mutual benefits accruing from integrity and respect.
• We take customer satisfaction personally—we are committed to providing superior value in our products and services on a continuing basis.
• We respect the individuality of each employee and foster an environment in which employees' creativity and productivity are encouraged, recognized, valued, and rewarded.
• We think of our suppliers as partners who share our goal of achieving the highest quality standards and the most consistent level of service.
• We are committed to being caring and responsive corporate citizens within the communities in which we operate.
• We are dedicated to creating value for our shareholders and financial community by performing in a manner that enhances the return on their investments.
