THE GAME OF LIFE

The Office of Counseling and Psychological Services Tests
How Well Baruch Students Play

By KATHLEEN MCKNALLY

Last Thursday, November 10, Baruch had an open house in the Globus Lounge at 360 Park Ave. South during club hours. The presentation was called "The Game of Life," sponsored by the Office of Counseling and Psychological Services. One of the coordinators of it, Dr. Janice Ruffin, is a clinical psychologist in the Student Personnel Services Office at Baruch. She explained that this open house is helpful in getting information out to the students on all the services offered at Baruch. The purpose is to let the students know of the availability of these programs.

The Globus Lounge was set up with an array of tables and seats. There were different programs at each table. Ruffin was at the "Self-Esteem" table. There were various handouts, including a test to help you assess your self-esteem. Ruffin will be having a workshop on "Building Positive Self-Esteem" on Wednesday, November 30, from 4:00 to 5:00 p.m. This workshop will concentrate on the accuracy of your self-esteem assessment and on improving your self-esteem. According to Ruffin, "people tend to be general and this helps them to have a focused self-assessment."

Dr. Elaine Soto, a counselor at Baruch, was at the "Assertiveness" table. She handed out questionnaires and score sheets that tested assertiveness. The mean score among college students is 115. A high score, 135 or more, signifies a highly assertive individual. A low score, 95 or less, signifies an individual who is not very assertive.

Soto explained, "In different situations you can be assertive at some times but not at others. She says assertiveness is "no option, but be aware of the consequences." She also explained the difference between assertiveness and aggressiveness. Assertiveness is standing up for personal rights and expressing thoughts, feelings and beliefs in direct, honest, and appropriate ways which do not violate another person's rights. Aggressiveness, on the other hand, is directly standing up for personal rights and expressing yourself in a way which is often dishonest, usually inappropriate, and always violates the rights of the other person.

At the "Careers and Academic Majors" table were Dr. Patricia Imbimbo and Dr. Toni Hens. Imbimbo spoke of students' compatibility in their choices of majors and what motivates us to choose majors. She also spoke of how one's values influence choices of majors and careers.

"Career satisfaction is based primarily on your interests," she emphasized. Imbimbo wants students to become aware of what they really want career-wise and to have an increased awareness. She said it is helpful to talk to upper-level students about their majors if they correspond to the majors you want. Also talk to people in the careers you want to pursue.

She feels, "It is okay for a freshman to be confused career-wise."

Dr. David Cheng, a psychology professor at Baruch, was stationed at the "Relationships" table. He had us make personal ads for ourselves and post them on the wall. The purpose of this was to meet people with similar interests. It is also, Dr. Cheng says, "a good way of letting you think about yourself." These ads help you focus on what you want in a...

DISTINGUISHED ALUMNI OF BARUCH

BY JACQUELINE MULHERN

Herbert M. Paul has the distinction of being the first Student Government President at Baruch to be re-elected. He served two consecutive terms before graduating from Baruch with a B.B.A. in accounting in 1952. Paul discussed what he learned from his experiences on the Student Council (now called the Day Session Student Government.)

"It all helped... simple things such as running a meeting, getting up on your feet to make a speech, trying to make a point and learning how to compromise."

He added that "there are really the things you're doing the rest of your life in business, social activities and with your family and friends."

Paul remembers when the Student Council discussed changing the school's name from City College downtown to the Bernard M. Baruch School of Business and Public Administration. The 1950s Communist paranoia of the McCarthy era earned City College a so-called "red" reputation because many uptown students participated in political demonstrations. Although downtown students were not involved in these activities, they had a left-wing reputation because newspapers reporting about City College did not differentiate between the uptown and downtown campuses. This confusion was disastrous for downtown campus graduates because few employers would hire someone from a politically controversial school. The name of the downtown campus was changed so as to distinguish it from the one uptown.

"The entire school was painted with the same brush," Paul explained.

He credits Baruch for giving him an "outstanding" education, saying that, "You came out of the school not only with a technical trade... but you left a better-rounded person."

He spoke highly of his professors, saying that they did not tolerate any "nonsense" from their students.

"I remember one professor saying (to my class) 'If you don't want to sit there and really use that seat, there's probably someone anxious to take it.' " He recalled.

After graduating from Baruch, he went to Harvard Law School because he was not sure what career he wanted, but he knew that law school would give him many options. He finished Harvard and was admitted to practice law in New York State. While serving in the Army in New Jersey, he went to New York University at night to do his M.B.A. He stayed at N.Y.U. to see "ALUMNI" on Page B4

The Holiday Movie Season

Part II December's Movies

The Boost
A classic encounter with a once great character who has hit a low ebb. After a failed attempt to assassinate the Queen of England, a troubled Beatle (Russell Crowe) is offered the chance to turn a new leaf and become a symbol of peace. Developed from a 1968 play by Edward Albee, The Boost is a thoughtful examination of a man trying to find his way back from the brink of despair.

The Good Thief
This film is based on the novel of the same name by Jeffery Deaver. In New York City, a retired gangster (Michael Douglas) is asked by his estranged daughter (Molly Ringwald) to help her achieve her dream of becoming a lawyer. As they navigate the dangerous world of organized crime, they must face their past and confront the consequences of their actions. Directed by John McTiernan (Die Hard, The Fugitive), The Good Thief is a gripping thriller that explores themes of family, redemption, and justice.

Lethal Weapon
The latest entry in the Lethal Weapon franchise, Lethal Weapon 5: The Final Call, is set in the heart of the Middle East. After a successful mission to rescue a kidnapped American diplomat, Riggs (Mel Gibson) and Murtaugh (Danny Glover) are invited to join a covert ops team led by a former CIA agent (played by a surprise celebrity). As they face off against a ruthless terrorist organization, they must use their unique skills and expertise to save the day. Lethal Weapon 5 is a high-octane action thriller that delivers on the franchise's signature blend of humor and action.

RoboCop
This sequel to the 1987 classic RoboCop follows the story of the憔悴 detective Alex Murphy (Detroit), who is reassembled as a cyborg cop in an attempt to save the city of Detroit from crime and corruption. Directed by Joel Silver (The Matrix, The Sixth Sense), RoboCop is a thrilling and action-packed sci-fi adventure that explores themes of power, corruption, and the nature of humanity.

The Naked Gun: From the Files of Police Squad
In this hilarious sequel to The Naked Gun, the bumbling detectives of Police Squad investigate the mysterious death of a famous actor (played by a surprise celebrity). With the help of their new boss, Chief Bureaucrat (played by a surprise celebrity), they must solve the case and bring justice to the streets of Los Angeles. Directed by Mel Brooks, The Naked Gun: From the Files of Police Squad is a non-stop laugh fest that delivers on the franchise's signature blend of humor and action.

Tequila Sunrise
In this dark and gritty tale, a former FBI agent (played by a surprise celebrity) is forced to confront his past when he is targeted by a dangerous drug lord. As he races against time to stop the narcotics trade, he must also navigate the treacherous world of law enforcement. Directed by Oliver Stone, Tequila Sunrise is a thought-provoking thriller that explores themes of political corruption, morality, and redemption.

Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles
In this sequel to the 1990 original, the teenaged turtles are back to save the world! As they face off against a mysterious new enemy, they must use their ninja skills to save the city of New York from destruction. Directed by Steve Barron (Flashdance, Top Gun), Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles is a heart-pumping adventure that delivers on the franchise's signature blend of humor and action.

The Treasure of the Sierra Madre
In this classic film, three unlikely partners (played by a surprise celebrity) set out to find a legendary gold mine in the Sierra Madre Mountains. As they face off against the dangers of the desert, they must also confront their own desires and ambitions. Directed by John Huston, The Treasure of the Sierra Madre is a masterful exploration of greed, loyalty, and friendship.

Catch in the middle of all this is Hillary, the woman both men love.

Frank Miller, the popstar comes to town and will write the screenplay as well.

Frank Miller says he is to write the screenplay himself and will direct the film himself.

Well, if Chucky is Freddy's found, Freddy Jr. can't see any reason not to be so. The resonance of the previous reviews, I think, justifies the idea that there is no reason not to be so. When we see the kids, they're not the same. Even Freddy is like, "Hey, look, there's Chucky Jr."

New Jersey Nets: A “Sorry Team”

By KEVIN M. DAMES

Due to a key trade, right before the season, I had to come on this season. Even with their “improvement,” the Nets will still become the worst team in the Eastern Conference. The Nets will feature Roy Hines, Alvin Ballard, William King, and former St. John’s center Bob Weiss. Believe me when I say that their chances of winning this season are minimal. They are also in the midst of a contract dispute with Chris Morris, who is one of the team’s best players.

The Nets have acquired a 6’9” power forward who is expected to obtain a high projection for the upcoming season. The Nets have signed a 6’3” point guard and a 6’8” power forward who is expected to have a high projection for the upcoming season. Last season the women’s basketball team finished 10-3, and this season they are 7-3, with Stevens Tech. just one loss away from their previous win streak. This newspaper was very happy to see the team perform well in the first two games of the season, but they lost their first game of the season. The team was not able to get back into the game and they lost to the opposition.

Although the team is not in the best position, they are still capable of winning. They have a lot of potential players on the team, and they are looking to make a comeback. THE BARUCH ATHLETE OF THE MONTH

By MICKEY KRAMER

It's that time again.

Time for The Ticker to choose the finest athlete for the month of November.

With the completion of the women's tennis, women's volleyball and men's soccer seasons and both basketball seasons just beginning the choice came down to our two first place bowling teams.

Frank Gomez, in his third year with the team, gets the nod.

Gomez raised his average about 20 pins per game from last year. How'd you do it? "I joined summer leagues and bowled all year long."

For the season, Gomez is rolling at a 187 clip. In his two matches in November he did even better.

On Nov. 6, vs Hofstra University, he helped average the team only loss with a three game series of 577 (or a 192 average). The following Sunday he was rested after two games, but once again showed why he's the best when he bowled a 181 and a 193.

On the year he has bowled the most games over 200, six, which is twice as many as any of his teammates and rolled the second highest game (227) as well as the second highest series, 621.

Gomez was pleased with the distinction; "I'm honored, the coach has recognized me as a good bowler."

When Coach Doug York was asked who he felt would be the best representative of his squad, it took him a split second to say "It's Frank."

Ok Coach, this month, "It's Frank."

THE ADVANCED SCOUTING REPORT
(Men's Basketball)

By STEVEN SCHEER

1987-88 Basketball team: This year's team hopes to improve on last year's 8-15 record.

One guard will be Tyrone Greaves. As a freshman last year Greaves was second in scoring and fourth in rebounding. He plays very well on the basket and is also a great competitor.

Cecilo Freeman will probably be the other starting guard. "Free," as he is called by his peers, is only 5'11" 165 lbs, but plays a very physical game for a guard. Free is aggressive on defense and drives well to the basket, but needs to be more under control when driving to the hoop.

As for the reserves:

Kevin June will be the backup center. June, who is from Leake Watts High School, is a good leaper who blocks shots very well. June's major weakness is his inexperience. He is enthusiastic and learning very quickly. Coach Rankis says that June's game is developing rapidly.

As a freshman last season Sandy Vardas contributed a lot to the team, leading the team in field goal percentage, shooting .52%. He is a crafty southpaw who can hit the three-point shot as well as draw fouls near a basket.

Victor Milikas is another freshman playing on the team. Milikas is a bright and intuitive player. He has good court awareness, takes passes well and should contribute.

Brian O'Connor is the only junior on this season's squad. He is described by coach Rankis as a "jack of all trades," which means that he plays a lot of positions well. O'Connor plays good defense, hits the open jumper and rarely turns the ball over.

Last season, Brian Skrilloff was third on the team in scoring, first in free throw percentage and second in steals. Skrilloff comes off picks well and runs the offense very well. Skrilloff is also a very good three point shooter. Last season he hit 30 out of 83 three pointers. Despite being slow footed, he also plays good position defense.

Another new comer is Bland Simkins. Simkins at 5'9" is the smallest player on the team. Bland is a good ball-handling point guard who coach Rankis feels, when he learns to be more in control of the ball (commiting less turnovers), he will become an outstanding player in the conference.

James Davis, Rob Scota and Leeza Williams are less experienced, but coach Rankis says, "they exhibit good work habits." He added, "With experience and better understanding of our offenses and defenses, they will be great additions to our basketball program."

Baruch will have some problems. For starters, like most Baruch teams, they lack a home gym (they play their home games at nearby Xavier High School), practices, though, are held in the Baruch gym. Consequently, because they practice in a smaller gym and play in a larger gym, they may have problems in transition from offense to defense.

Coach Rankis has a positive outlook on the season. "I'm looking early on to give experience to as many players as possible before we start playing CUNY Conference games. I expect to be in the upper half of our division. How far we go depends on how unselfishly we play and how we mesh our individual skills into a team picture. I expect to be much better than last year and am realistically shooting for 15 wins."

Captain Randy Gurin shares similar sentiments. "We have a lot of hard working freshmen on the team. We have less experience but more talent than last year. I expect to have a winning season."

They have a good combination of youth, talent and a lot of confidence in themselves. If they can overcome the hardship of playing all of their games "away," we may be headed for an exciting season.
