February Is Black History Month

By WILLIAM ST. LOUIS

To commemorate Black History Month, Day Session Student Government and several clubs are sponsoring events during the month of February. Some of the activities will feature guest speakers such as: Bob Stade, former program coordinator on January 26, according to Carl Aylman, director of student activities. Aylman said he was notified by Williams on the morning of January 26 that she had been hired as the new coordinator.

Williams was elected to the position. According to Aylman, she was notified byCoordinate

Cafeteria Proposal Awaits Approval

By GEORGIA KONTOS

A manual food-service cafeteria is almost a reality at Baruch. According to the chairman of Baruch college Auxiliary Enterprises and Director of Purchasing, David Gartick, the request for proposal (RFP) will be released on or about February 1. The manual cafeteria will be located at 46 E. 26 Street, on the fifth floor.

Associate Dean of Students, Ronald M. Aaron, said, when the RFP is released the Food Dining Management Committee will select several potential recommended vendors to service the cafeteria. "We don't have contractors yet. What is going to happen is going to largely depend on the overall program or proposals submitted by a given vendor. They have the opportunity once the specs are released to come in and see what currently exists. There is also a general sentiment that [the vendors] are going to provide some of the equipment with the possibility that the corporation will consider some cost-sharing venture," he added.

Williams Resigns As Program Coordinator

States his salary was too low

Potter appointed new coordinator

Ron Williams, former program coordinator.

Ron Williams, program coordinator might manager left his position in the student activities office December 30, 1988, citing "lack of mobility" and the low salary as his main reasons for leaving, he said.

Among his responsibilities as program coordinator were scheduling and advising clubs, said Williams. The job needs to be upgraded to make the position more involved, he said.

The job has "definitely" had a high turnover rate, said Williams. "Our different coordinators in five years." Williams suggested that the job needed to be "enhanced" to make it more appealing. Debra Bick-Duggan, assistant director of student activities, agreed "This position has been turning over rather frequently, with every couple of years it turns over."

"I'm not surprised if there is alot of turnover," said Samael Johnson, dean of students, "It's pretty high. The reason for this, Johnson stated was that "It's not a high level job, and usually it is thought of as a stepping stone kind of position."

Johnson stated, "it's something we'll have to live with," because "it's an entry level job," as long as the "director and assistant director will stick around long enough to transmit how things work in the student center I don't see a problem."

The position should also be upgraded to make it more involved, said Williams. The coordinator should be able to serve on committees and have "more impact on"

A LACK OF COORDINATION

The departure of Ross Williams from the position of program coordinator/night manager, brings to light an interesting problem that runs rampant throughout Baruch. Many faculty members are actually prevented from participating in college life because of bureaucratic red tape, and a great number of these faculty members want to do more to help make this college a better place. A point in case was Williams who could frequently be seen sitting around the Student Center playing chess. Those who knew him were aware that this was not necessarily by choice.

The position of program coordinator seems to place the office holder in a Catch-22 situation. On the one hand, the coordinator is offered little or no recognition for performing his/her job, as well as the job extending almost nothing in the way of a challenge, or professional opportunities. On the other hand, the only way to attain upward mobility in this position is to do such an extraordinary job that one cannot help but be offered a promotion or a salary increase. Unfortunately, the opportunity for achieving anything in this position is almost nil because as Williams, and apparently three other coordinators found out over the last five years, they had nothing to offer in the way of decisions.

On the other hand, the College administration has to make a choice where this job is concerned. Either it is a legitimate position offering some possibility of advancement and decision-making ability, or it should be abolished altogether. The reality is that this job as it stands, is being used as a place for students and faculties that could more profitably be spent elsewhere.

Good luck to Denise Potter, a popular figure in the Student Center. She may have a long head of hair.

WE ARE THE WORLD

As we approach Black History Month, students at Baruch should consider carefully the racial tensions that permeate our city. With all with the sensibility inherent in this issue, it is difficult to step back and to reach a rational solution to racial discrimination. In fact, as time has gone on, it is now apparent that the main problem is defined clearly where racial discrimination is taking place. Yet, this is exactly what we have to do, and as college students we ought to lead the way toward understanding the complicated interaction between people of different cultural heritages. It is up to us to continue searching for a solution to the aggravating differences and disparities. Students must take the efforts of leaders like Martin Luther King, Jr. and John F. Kennedy.

Baruch, however, will represent New York and the country as a whole. A full 21% of the clubs are racially or culturally-oriented. While the goal of some of these clubs is indeed to share understandings of the respective heritages, for the majority of clubs it is necessary to offer a haven for those of the same heritage and to be by themselves, with the people of the culture. Thus, the need for Baruch to pool the resources of higher learning, is to overcome and expand one's experience beyond that known by those in one's community.

As February passes, here are some questions each of us ought to think about in order to better understand our heritage.

1. Why has the ownership of small, family-run businesses skipped black people almost entirely?

2. Why is affirmative action a form of discrimination against whites and does it strengthen or weaken the American way of life?

3. Why can't racial problems be openly discussed?

4. What can all of us do at Baruch to create a less tense and more open atmosphere (within our own world, at least?)

Typing that needs no tutoring.

Students, your assignment today is to learn how to use the Smith Corona XL 2500 typewriter.

Oops. Don't get too settled in your seat, the XL 2500 isn't a very difficult study. In fact, unlike most electronic typewriters, it's a downright snap to pick up.

The Spell-Right, '50,000 word electronic dictionary adds new meaning to the word 'simple.'

WordEraser" erases entire words at a single touch.

WordFind finds your mistakes before anyone else can.

The XL 2500 even makes correcting mistakes as easy as making them.

With the Smith Corona Correcting Cassette, you simply pop in your correction tape.

There are no spools to unwind...no complicated threading...no tangles.

Of course, we've also added lots of other fine features to the XL 2500. There's full line correction, Auto Half-Space, Auto Center, even our Right Ribbon System, which automatically prevents you from using the wrong combination of ribbon and correcting cassette.

Oh, one more feature we forgot to mention—the price. You'll be happy to hear that the XL 2500 is affordable.

So you see, the XL 2500 won't just make your writing easier.

It'll also help you with your economics.

Employee Benefits on the Rise...-

BY JOHN C. T NE

In 1978, in the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company's annual Employee Benefits survey, the average employee benefit cost for all employees was $1.90 billion. In the past five years, the average cost of employee benefits has increased to $3.80 billion. This represents a 100% increase in employee benefits costs over the past five years. The average employee benefit cost for all employees is now $2.80 billion.

The increase in employee benefit costs has been due to a number of factors, including inflation, rising health care costs, and increased demand for benefits by employees. Inflation has caused benefit costs to increase at a rate faster than the rate of inflation. Rising health care costs have also contributed to the increase in benefit costs. Many companies have responded to these rising costs by increasing their benefits to employees. This has resulted in a higher cost of employee benefits.

The cost of calling Card Dialing

Calling cards. Who are they? They are credit cards for local and regional phone calls.

There are three major telecommunications companies that issue calling cards for telephone services in the United States. These are AT&T, MCI Communications Corporation, and Sprint. The three companies provide a variety of calling cards, each with different features and benefits. For example, AT&T offers the calling card, MCI has the Global Card, and Sprint has the Sprint Card.

The calling cards are designed to help people save money on their phone bills. People can purchase calling cards and use them to make phone calls. The cost of the phone call is charged to the person who purchased the calling card. This allows people to avoid the high costs of local and regional phone calls.

The three companies offer a variety of calling cards with different features and benefits. These features can include discounts, free calls, and other benefits. The three companies also offer calling cards with different rates, so people can choose the one that best fits their needs.

The three companies also offer calling cards with different services, such as free calls to other countries and international services. The three companies also offer calling cards with different features, such as free calls to other countries.

The media are in essence, in collusion with the people who stage these events...

...the media did not cooperate with them."

What happens is, "the media becomes crucial today as part of the story, rather than just covering the story." Because they have become so used to this type of marketing, the mass media in news serves the needs of their public. If they don't get those same media, mass media images they're going to lose the audience, if they lose the audience they lose their ratings, if they lose their ratings then they lose their jobs. So, there is a continual understanding that if you are going then something of a basically imaginary image value, you're going to have a better than even chance of getting it on. These are the three things that the media are conditioned for, the fashion, the political public relations.

The only protection public relations have on you, one such case is Michael Dukakis. He is in the army today. According to Secunda, "Pictures of him, which were done from a certain angle like he was Seymour Cassel wearing a hat. It was almost identical the way he appeared, pressing out from under the hat to look like he was a tank commander. And in the midst of it all, there was a little old lady standing there who was saying, that he was not being fair because he was in a hat, he became a story of a Backer's. It was also an obviously representative attempt to depict himself as a conservative, when clearly that was not what he was." Secunda has been biased in his own book, the Dukakis campaign. He has not failed Marketing 2000, the introductory class, since they did not apply the principles learned there. He also recalled one incident he was involved with and his role in imagery in the media. The result? Who was just inarguably is prominent, prominent with the people who were making government. MATADOR, a Spanish film, with English subtitles, takes place in the historic center of Madrid. The time is the present. The events in the story open two days after "NECROPHILIACS," which was released on January 15th. The film is directed by the renowned director, who has won numerous awards for his work in the film industry.

In "MATADOR," the story revolves around the lives of two couples in Madrid. One couple is composed of a middle-aged man and a younger woman, while the other couple is made up of a young woman and an older man. The film explores the complexities of relationships and the challenges of maintaining a sense of identity in a rapidly changing society.

The film is shot in a variety of locations throughout Madrid, including the heart of the city and various neighborhoods. The cinematography is stunning, capturing the beauty and architecture of the city in a way that is both visually striking and emotionally resonant.

The performances of the actors are exceptional, with each character bringing depth and nuance to their roles. The chemistry between the couples is palpable, and the tension and dynamics of their relationships are expertly conveyed.

An underlying theme of the film is the tension between the past and the present, and the struggle to find one's place in a rapidly changing world. The film raises questions about the nature of identity, relationships, and the role of art in society.

"MATADOR" is a thought-provoking and beautifully realized film that is sure to captivate audiences around the world.

At the assistant's voice, a bell sounded and the door slid open. 'What's the problem?' Stu thought. 'Well, it certainly feels good to be back on solid ground!" He swallowed hard. "It's been a long time since I've stepped on the earth, you know. I've been on the moon, you know."

THE BARUCH ATHLETE OF THE MONTH

By STEVEN SCHEER

While all of us were all enjoying our long vacation; either in Florida, Europe, or even our dorm room in New York, the Baruch athletes were still working hard and competing through the month of January.

So, for the Month of January, our Athlete of the Month is... Tyrone Greaves, of our exciting basketball team.

Greaves has been the team's most consistent player and one of the most explosive players in the CUNY Conference. He is averaging over 20 points, five rebounds and more than two steals. Those numbers have led him to be named Cuny Athlete of the Week in early January. Greaves' solid play has led his team to a record of 8-7 (4-4 in the Conference). It is a drastic improvement over last year's 9-18 record.

Team Captain Randy Gurin says, "He is a great player and a team leader. Last season he came in and contributed right away. He's very consistent."

Coach Ray Rankis also has high praise for his second year standout. "When he first came to the program, he was just getting his feet wet as a student, a man and a basketball player. Greaves shows qualities that you want to lead your team and school. He shows good leadership qualities on and off the court and is a pleasure to coach. Since last season, he worked on his shot and improved from being decent defensively to an above-average defensive player — but he still has room for improvement."

Greaves comments, "I felt proud and happy, but I also feel that the team has helped me a lot..."

Incidentally, Greaves picked the Bengals. As you can see, Greaves plays better than he picks Super Bowl winners.

This is our first honoree for the new year. It wouldn’t surprise me if we see more and more of Greaves on these pages in 1989, 1990 and 1991.

The Baruch men's basketball team ended 1988 with a 6-5 record (3-2 in CUNY). Their good start was important because Baruch was now heading into a long stretch against conference teams. 1989 began with five of six games against CUNY rivals.

On Jan. 7, Baruch played at City College. Four weeks earlier CCNY took a major beating from Baruch at Xavier High School. This time playing before their home crowd, CCNY looked to avenge the loss.

The statement were on fire in the first half taking almost all of their shots. They went up by as many as 18 points, but led by only 11 at half time.

Baruch relaxed and CCNY took advantage of the situation; dominating the 2nd half coming back from 10 points down with 6:00 left to win 87-80. In those last six minutes, Baruch scored only 4 points. Coach Ray Rankis was not pleased with the ending. "In the beginning we wouldn’t miss, but couldn’t hit a shot or free throw down the stretch. Our biggest problem was our bad free throw shooting and inconsistent offense."

Randy Gurin summed up the game as such, "We thought the game was won, so we relaxed and then lost our composure."

Next up for Baruch was another road game at John Jay College on Jan. 10. Baruch was down for most of the game, but battled back late in the game to the score at 81-81 as Gurin hit a rebound basket with .02 left to force overtime. In overtime, the statesmen took control, holding John Jay scoreless for the first 4 minutes of OT with a smothering defense. Final score: Baruch 89, John Jay 86.

Baruch got a breather from conference play when they visited Pratt Institute on Jan. 12. Pratt was not much of a challenge but Baruch only led 41-33 at halftime. Rankis gave an inspiring pep talk at halftime and Baruch came out firing and stretched their lead to 28 behind the Ticker's Athlete of the Month, Tyrone Greaves' game high 27 points. Baruch won 87-66. Rankis was happy with his team's performance. "Everyone played and contributed to the victory and there was no let down in performance by anyone."

Two days later, Baruch played their fourth road game in a row at Hunter College. In December, the statesmen upset Hunter at home behind Greaves' 29 points. This time Baruch couldn’t get it going as Greaves finished with only five points. Baruch wasn’t able to penetrate Hunter's unaggressive 3-2 zone defense taking as much as 35 seconds to get a shot off. For the game Baruch shot 31% from the floor and almost as bad at the charity stripe. The statesmen also committed 25 turnovers. On the game, Rankis commented, "They totally took us out of our offense."

Tyrone Greaves, who Hunter keyed on all game said, "We didn't come to play." Final Score: Hunter 70, Baruch 50.

On Jan. 19, Baruch played at York College. Baruch raced to a quick 6-0 lead, but fell behind 4-12. Baruch went up 43-27 at halftime and widened their lead to twenty-one points early in the second half. Baruch’s poor free throw shooting continued as they shot 4-12 in the second half. York cut Baruch's lead to six points but the Statesmen held on for a 71-63 victory. Randy Gurin led Baruch with 20 points.

On Jan. 21, Baruch returned to the friendly confines of Xavier High School against undefeated College of Staten Island (CSI). CSI started off fast taking an early 20-7 lead. They then stretched the lead to 11 points later in the first half. Baruch cut it to 55-41 at halftime. The Statesmen then cut it to 59-50 early in the second half, but the Baruch men came from behind to win 74-63. CSI attempted 31 of 58 three-point shots and went 10-31. CSI got 17 of 58 two-point shots and went 8-19. The Statesmen hit 9 of 17 of their free shots.

Tyrone Greaves, who Hunter keyed on all game, scored 20 points. Baruch cut it to 21 points later in the first half. Baruch cut it to 55-41 at halftime. The Statesmen then cut it to 59-50 early in the second half, but the Baruch men came from behind to win 71-63. Randy Gurin led Baruch with 20 points. CSI attempted 31 of 58 three-point shots and went 10-31. CSI got 17 of 58 two-point shots and went 8-19. The Statesmen hit 9 of 17 of their free shots.

Greaves had 20 in the first half. Randy Gurin contributed 16 points. Cecilio Freeman had a career high nine assists.

Baruch's record is 9-8 overall, 5-5 in the CUNY Conference, good for fourth place, behind CSI, Lehman and CCNY.

Baruch has made a remarkable improvement over last season, already equaling their win total with nine, and with ten more regular season games to play, they're sure to break it.
